London Railway. "By and large I would say the board of directors holds few surprises for those who have been following it," Mr. Perrault, businessman, three from the south following to the "closeness of the Bennett family."

The Liberal leader said if the bank pursues economic rather than political aims, "it will be a worthwhile institution."

"I think what is of interest and of real importance will be the names of management and executive personnel, the people who will make the day-to-day decisions."

"No doubt many directors have demonstrated business acumen and ability. But I think it is equally important that this bank be completely divorced from the political community and only in that way will it serve the best interests of the business community and the people."

Mr. Gunderson has said he is no longer raising funds for the Social Credit party. "I hope that is so, that he has acquired a better degree of objectivity," Mr. Perrault said.

Alex Macdonald (NDP-Vancouver East) quipped:

"It is unfortunate that it wasn't W. A. C. himself (who was elected). He always struck me as being a pretty good banker."

"But seriously, I would have no objection to this. The fact he is the premier's son should not restrict his activities any. He's an individual person and entitled to lead his own life."

Oak Bay Liberal Alan Macfarlane called Mr. Bennett "a fine young businessman. People are going to say he is going to control the bank through his father's influence. That need not be so. He probably will do the job properly. I hope he does."

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Courtney Hadcock found "nothing wrong" with the election of Mr. Bennett. "He's a young man, pretty smart and I don't see any harm. We need more youth in these things."

approval of a judge for their release.

Neil J. Welch, special agent in charge of the FBI in Buffalo, said he had learned of the meeting through underworld sources a few hours before the raid.

Monday, Inspector William Pilkington, head of the Metropolitan Toronto police morality squad, said the Mafia is not active in the city.

"We know some drugs have come into Metro from New York and some from Buffalo," he said. "But there is little evidence of drugs, which were imported into Canada, going out of Metro into the United States."

Marijuana sold in Toronto, he said, did not originate from an organized syndicate.

Deputy Chief Bernard Simmonds of the Metro police said the Mafia has tried a number of times to get a foothold, but police have crushed their efforts.

Assistant Commissioner Howard Graham, head of the criminal investigation branch of the Ontario Provincial Police, also said the Mafia is not a factor in Ontario crime and there is no evidence of Mafia infiltration.

MONTREAL DRUG CENTRE

MONTRÉAL (CP) — Superintendent Carriere of the RCMP said today Montreal is one of the major centres in the world for the international transportation of narcotics.

The superintendent was commenting on published reports that the highway route between Montreal and New York is one of North America's principal narcotics traffic routes.

"We have evidence that Montreal has been used in the past a great deal for this sort of thing. There have been a number of convictions for large-scale narcotics smuggling."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Except for the north coast B.C. was cloudy overnight. Showers were reported from many points and Williams Lake recorded snow with an early morning temperature of 32 degrees. A ridge of high pressure building in the north will bring decreasing cloud to the Cariboo and Bulkley Valleys today. This clearing trend will move southward Wednesday but afternoon maximums will still be well below the long-time averages for mid-May.

PARENTS PLEA FOR WRITE-IN

OTTAWA (CP) — Steven Truscott's parents hope a write-in campaign will influence the government to acquit their son despite a Supreme Court of Canada decision upholding his conviction as a sex slayer.

Dan Truscott, father of Steven, who was convicted at 14 of the 1959 murder of Lynne Harper, 12, near Clinton, Ont., said today "hundreds of letters of sympathy from people all over the world" have come in since the high court ruling last week.

There has been a constant stream of telephone calls to the Truscott home at nearby Richmond, Ont., and to their son at Collins Bay penitentiary near Kingston, he said.

THRONE SPEECH

but the throne speech made no mention of replacements.

The speech did contain "a rephrased vision of the North," indicating the Liberal government had at least realized that the North deserved attention.

"There is a mysterious reference to capital punishment and divorce," said Mr. Diefenbaker. "But Prime Minister Pearson has left out abortion, the other segment of his social trilogy."

Resurrection of the Canada Development Corporation indicated that "having resurrected Walter Gordon they had to resurrect his work of works."

DOUGLAS DISAPPOINTED

Mr. Douglas said he was disappointed at the many promises of new studies and task forces.

This government has been in power for four years. It should be past the stage of studies and conferences and white papers."

The NDP leader said he would like to have seen a full-scale legislative attack on housing problems, a major program of industrial development, a clear statement on international affairs and a promise of steps toward free university tuitions.

Alex Patterson, acting leader of the Social Credit party, said the speech presented a sorry picture of Canada's spiritual development, admitting it is far behind material progress.

"We've already had so many studies never implemented. We've reached the place to stop so much studying and resolve the problems indicated."

Creditiste Leader Caouette said there was nothing in the speech that was worth comment.

"It certainly isn't a throne speech for an election. The old routine is merely repeated time and time again. Apart from some plans for economic development it tells us nothing."

The session-opening speech, a 5,500-word document, forecast a variety of government legislation.

The list included bills on consumer affairs, corporations, housing, divorce, capital punishment, water resources, television, the Criminal Code, immigration, unemployment insurance, coal mines, Indians, and a handful of other topics.

Also promised were studies into the constitution; satellite television; agriculture; relationships of industry, labor and government; safety standards; dissemination of scientific and "I would like our loyal friends to know that the government of Canada still has not decided whether or not to acquit Steven," he said in a statement.

ASKS SUPPORT

"If you believe as we do in the innocence of my son please let the government know today by letter or telegram addressed to your member of Parliament and the minister of justice."

Steven, now 22, was sentenced to death after his conviction. The sentence was commuted to life imprisonment and he has been behind bars ever since. He will be eligible for parole in about two years.

Foreign Investment White Paper in Fall

OTTAWA — The government's white paper on foreign investment in Canada, will be placed before the House of Commons next fall, it was learned there Tuesday following the throne speech read at the opening of the centennial session.

Privy Council President Walter Gordon last January was named by Prime Minister L. B. Pearson to head up a committee of ministers to examine the structure of Canadian industry, with special reference to foreign ownership and control. It is working with a special task force.

After the report of the task force has been studied by the ministerial committee, it will be referred to the full cabinet for approval. Later, in the fall, the white paper evolved from these studies will be presented to the Commons for examination by a parliamentary committee.

"While the government is conscious of the desirability of a greater degree of domestic control of our resources and our key industries, it is also aware of the continuing importance of inflows of foreign investment in order to ensure an optimum development of the economy," said the throne speech read by Governor General Roland Michener.

"To enable Canadians to gain a clearer understanding of these issues a white paper on this subject will be laid before parliament," said the throne speech.

in the four-year-old talks, originally aimed at slashing tariffs on both industrial and agricultural products by 50 per cent.

The American and Common Market delegates met again today, this time in wider talks which included the other two parties comprising the "big four" in the negotiations—Britain and Japan.

Also at the steering committee meeting were Canada, Australia, the Scandinavian countries, Austria and Switzerland.

OUTLOOK DIM

Erie Wyndham White, director-general of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, said he feels hopes are dim for beating the deadline "if we don't reach agreement by tonight."

White, who presided at the overnight meeting, gave the no-progress report this morning.

Accord among the "big four" was essential for the GATT-sponsored talks to have any chance of achieving their goal of the biggest trade liberalization the world had known.

The stalemate could result in an emergency conference by foreign ministers of many of the 53 participating nations.

The key figures in the negotiations are William Roth, President Johnson's special representative, and Jean Rey of Belgium, who represents the Common Market members—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

A Full Plate

FEW OF THE LEGISLATIVE items listed in yesterday's Speech from the Throne are new, but they form a governmental program of a varied nature which, put into practice, will constitute a very important body of laws and undertakings.

A number of the projects are of direct impact on wage-earners and householders. One of these provides for formation of a new governmental department of corporate and consumer affairs, and arises from the recent studies of retail prices and the factors involved in the soaring price level. But quality standards and merchandising practices are also important aspects of the new department's jurisdiction, along with safeguards for the small investor. This should be a popular innovation.

Farmers and fishermen will benefit from an expansion of federal loans, and means to increase industrial productivity will demand parliament's attention. In a similar field will be the controversial Canada Development Corporation, which was devised as a means of encouraging Canadians to invest in Canadian enterprises. Recent statistics show a surprising volume of Canadian investment in United States securities while our own business ventures must seek American funds. The Canada Development Corporation could be instrumental in channeling Canadian money into domestic opportunities, but the many problems arising from such government intervention have yet to be met. The overall principle, however, should appeal to most Canadians: confidence in the country's future must be expressed in more than words.

'Improvements' Should Improve

THE PUBLIC SHOULD NOT BE stampeded into supporting the proposal to build a retaining wall and promenade along the base of the beach bank between Cook Street and Clover Point. Warnings are out that the cliffs are in danger of immediate erosion, but all who have enjoyed this stretch of the Dallas Road waterfront know that the erosion has been negligible over the past 60 years. That is not to deny that sea and weather will gradually take their toll, but to urge that instant action on a retaining wall is necessary on an emergency basis is to exaggerate the situation. It is not yet time for the panic button.

The worst erosion that can be remembered along the southern waterfront took place years ago in the natural bowl of Horseshoe Bay, directly south of the flagpole. It occurred when, against advice, the city carved diagonal paths down the sloping banks, with the result that, the protecting underbrush having been removed, the clay immediately began to slide. And that is the real answer to prevention of erosion of the cliffs: preservation of the natural cover of grass and bushes which prevents the weather from washing the soil down.

The tarred walk around the base of Holland Point is something less than a success. It provides a promenade for those who wish to be nearer to the water than the cliff-top, but its jagged rock fill is not a thing of beauty.

The shore in that vicinity is mainly solid rock. But in the Cook Street-Clover Point stretch the pebbles and boulders of the beach run right up to the clay bank. This beach has long been a somewhat secluded area: a quiet place for sunbathing or reading. To build a walk along the base of the bank will be to dissipate this relative privacy and bring foot traffic within a few feet of beach users.

The question becomes one of whether to cater to the promenaders or the sitters—and also whether or not the "improvement" will destroy the natural wild beauty of the area which is such an attraction to both categories of users.

The onus is on the planners to show first that the retaining wall and walk are really necessary; and secondly that if built, the addition will be a compatible one, harmonizing with the landscape and adding to rather than detracting from its natural charm. The project must be approached as a landscaping challenge rather than a slick engineering job. The world is full of concrete, brick and macadam, and civic authorities should be very sure of the final effect of their plans before they tamper with the priceless heritage of the Strait.

Our Turn To Cheer

LAST WEEKEND VICTORIA won the John F. Kennedy Memorial Trophy, symbol of soccer supremacy among first class club teams from Mexico, the Pacific Coast of the United States and Canada—an occasion for this city to pay its tributes to a group of resident athletes who have proved their right to acclaim.

These are young men who live in this community, play football because they enjoy it and have, under expert coaching, reached a pinnacle of performance seldom if ever achieved in the sport here.

To the boys who came up through our public schools and to those who have come here from such soccer strongholds as England and Scotland go hearty congratulations and good wishes for future seasons. They have reached the top in the division of play open to them and deserve recognition at a time when soccer is achieving more widespread popularity than ever before as the international game.

The New Phase Britain and the ECM

BRITAIN'S second bid for membership in the Common Market is being made by a government whose prime minister opposed the first bid.

This is a measure of how much the situation has changed in the past four years. Because of the many changes in Britain, on the continent and in the United States, the prospects of the eventual admission of Britain to the Common Market have improved radically. In these four years it has been borne in upon the British people that their role as a global power is over. During the Second World War the noble flight of the British people and the aura of Churchill's greatness made the world believe that the British empire, over whose liquidation he refused to preside, would continue to be one of the three superpowers directing the peace of the world.

It was this unrealistic exaggeration of Britain's postwar power that accounts more than anything else for Roosevelt's miscalculations in his dealings with Stalin at Teheran and Yalta.

The shadow of the illusion of Britain's global power continued to hang over British policy during the first negotiations for membership in the Common Market. The Macmillan government thought of itself as a world power negotiating with the Europeans, as head of a Commonwealth and the special ally of the United States. These considerations played a great, perhaps decisive, part in General de Gaulle's veto of the first bid. The illusion and the pretense since then have been almost washed away, and Britain today is in fact applying for membership as the nation which inhabits the islands that are geographically a part of Europe. There linger on shreds of the old imperial position from Cyprus to Malaysia. But it is obvious to all that Britain knows that it cannot really afford to sustain that role, and that in the next few years a decently phased disengagement is certain.

Change in Relations

During these same four years there has been a radical change in the relations between Western Europe and the United States. At the time of the first bid it was tacitly assumed, and not very tacitly at that, that Britain would speak for the United States in the Common Market. It was assumed at the same time that West Germany would be the principal military satellite of the United States within the NATO alliance.

These assumptions are gone. West Germany has broken out of the satellite position and is embarked on a policy of continental entente with her neighbor France and with Eastern Europe.

Harold Wilson's government has continued to play the role of a faithful ally of the United States. But only because it has to. No one who knows British opinion can doubt that these proud people are irked by their financial dependence on Washington and that they yearn for a more independent role. In this, they are becoming increasingly in tune with the great European tide of opinion—often but inaccurately called Gaullism—which looks forward to the creation of a greater European community that is no longer dependent upon Washington.

In the course of these four years the continental Europeans, who now constitute the Six of the Common Market, have come to realize that while they are profiting greatly from the Common Market arrangements, they are, as compared with the United States and as compared with the high potential of the Soviet Union, not yet in sight of equality of power. The fact that Britain, despite all her problems at home and her debts abroad, is very strong in industrial know-how, in the management of modern industry, in technological genius, in the conduct of international shipping, insurance and banking, makes Britain a very strong addition to the European community. It is being realized on the continent that if the British have much to gain from membership, they have also much to contribute.

It is, I believe, generally agreed that many adjustments will have to be made in order to accommodate Britain to the market and to make her membership satisfactory to the existing Six. This will take time—perhaps as long as two years. But while predictions are rarely safe, while optimism is not one of the easily felt sentiments in the world today, it does seem probable that because the situation has changed so greatly, Britain's second bid will fare better than her first.

Fine Humane Article

I should like to commend Arthur Mayse on his very fine and humane article on the Truscott case. Of course Mr. Mayse wrote as a parent who has known the joys and sorrows of parenthood.

I feel that we live in a truly barbaric age when a boy of 14 is first condemned to death and then to life imprisonment and I heartily agree with Mr. Mayse that the way to handle such cases would be to confine such offenders to a mental institution as of course any boy or in fact any man who commits such a crime is not mentally well. However, here in B.C. we have blacktop and Mr. Gagliardi has his $700,000 jet plane but we are pitifully short of school facilities, hospital beds and facilities for handling chronic and mental cases. We the people are to blame as we elect Mr. Bennett.

Mr. Mayse has few peers when he writes about youth problems and his beloved forests and streams and I agree with the strong views he expresses on these subjects. However, this government for the sake of the almighty dollar is desecrating our streams and forests which are the heritage not of the present Social Credit government but of the future generations who will bear the fruits of this wanton wastage of this most beautiful nation of ours. — M. P. B. Wixson, 2530 Lansdowne.

Parent's Pledge

On Monday, should the experts say, That Johnny must decide his way, Then truly will I follow through, Though all good plans end up askew, On Tuesday, if the minds decide, That Johnny not be quite so free, Then meekly will I tug the reins, Though no one thank me for my pains.

Wednesday may be face-about, When all rebellion I must rout, Poor Johnny, as I lower the boom, Confused, runs screaming from the room.

On Thursday I must now be bold, A tale of sex needs I unfold, Nevertheless, I'll not be shy, While Johnny squirms before my eyes.

Friday, oops, it's weekend now, The bedtime hour may cause a row, But — the experts can't decide — Oh, good heavens, spare my hide!

Saturday it's time for chores,

But Johnny wants to play outdoors, This day's ruling I must check

Or my poor child I might wreck,

On Sunday I must take a rest,

And read up on the latest test, Tomorrow may bring guidance new,

I pledge my very best to do.

FROM SINGAPORE

The In-Fighting Continues in China

ONE year after the first damning wall poster went up to herald the dismissal of the Rector of Peking University, the "great cultural revolution" has fallen victim to in-fighting among its ostensible champions more intricate than the struggle waged against President Liu Shao-chi and his "black gang" of bourgeois reactionaries.

The immediate objective of government by revolutionary committees representing the masses, the army and redeemed administrative cadres, instead of government by an entrenched bureaucracy, has still only officially been achieved in the cities of Peking and Shanghai, and four out of China's 26 provinces and autonomous regions.

Nowhere, however, does the "triple alliance" find it more difficult to shake down into common harness than at the top, where Marshal Lin Piao represents the army, Premier Chou En-lai, the administration and the "cultural revolutionary committee" advised by Chiang Ching, Mao Tse-tung's sharp-tongued wife, the mass organizations.

Apparently baffling contradictions reflect the subtle jostling for power in the troika. On May Day Lin Piao, though officially honored as Mao's closest comrade, had to suffer the presence on the rostrum of two vice-chairmen of the National Defence Council whom he had earlier successfully denounced as "protectors of Liu Shao-chi," after they had argued against his demands that drastic action be taken against the President. On the other hand, three senior protégés of Chou En-lai were once more viciously attacked on Peking wallposters this week, although they also had been seen on the side of the angels at the Labor Day celebrations in Peking. One was known to have incurred the wrath of Chiang Ching. The other had attracted the suspicious jealousy of Lin Piao.

China's long and surprising May Day "Honors List" of top-ranking Communist officials was nevertheless a personal triumph for Premier Chou, who has been exercising his genius for compromise to prevent a catastrophic explosion between the extremists on either side of him—the way-out Maoists who want Liu Shao-chi's blood, and their bitter "revisionist" opponents in party, administration and army. Reports of strong and stubborn resistance to the cultural revolution continue to pour in from the provinces, and left-wing Chinese analysts say that these have very typically prompted the Prime Minister to urge that for the sake of unity Liu should be let down lightly and quietly relegated to some sinecure, not stamped into the dust in the hope that this will throw all anti-Maoists in the army into disarray. That is more likely to turn them into local warlords.

Unifying Focus

Fearing that China may crack in two, Chou has set out to draw power to himself, not in order to build up a third fighting faction, but to neutralize the existing ones. He identified himself with the Maoists by publicly denouncing Liu Shao-chi, yet at the same time began coaxing back to the fold "revisionist" party bosses and army chiefs in the provinces who distrusted Lin but would accept Chou's private promises of protection and a commonsense policy for China's future.

By shifting political and military weight from the anti-Mao opposition to the Maoist triple alliance, he could lighten the first and provide a counterpoise against the extremists in the second. The Maoists, anxious to isolate Liu, and at the same time build their minority into a majority so that they could excommunicate him constitutionally, ostensibly fell in with Chou's plan for general reconciliation.

Conciliation

On May 1, therefore, 81-year-old Marshal Chu Teh and six other leaders who had shortly before been mercilessly castigated by the Maoists turned up full of smiles in the concourse around the Chairman. Even more significant than this, powerful provincial military chiefs, many of whose headquarters were condemned only last month for organizing an anti-party "white terror" in China's outlying regions, had also come to Peking for the celebrations. These included Chang Kuo-hua, the "revisionist" overlord of Tibet, the deputy commanders for the autonomous regions of Inner Mongolia and Sinkiang, the site of China's nuclear installations, and commanders or their deputies from Lanchow, Kunming, Chengtu, and Canton—responsible in all for 10 huge and troublesome provinces.

Among Lesser Cadres

Meanwhile, the conciliation campaign continues throughout the country among lesser cadres, who are being allowed to atone for past sins by joining all good men in "criticizing and repudiating" Liu Shao-chi and the small group of powerholders who have taken the capitalist road."

The future course of the cultural revolution nevertheless remains as unpredictable as ever, for all three groups in the triple alliance see it in different terms. For Chiang Ching it means a struggle that can end only with the establishment of Mao's completely classless communal society in which the millions are the masters and "self" is forgotten.

For Lin Piao, the cultural revolution is today a national movement led and directed by the army, the strongest and most disciplined element in all local triple alliances.

However, when Mao dies, Lin Piao may prefer an alliance with Chou En-lai and the party—a "professional" partnership in which there would be no room for Chiang Ching.

Production

Experts agree that after observing a decent silence, Chou would be expected to guide China gently back to a slow-motion "cultural evolution" and a policy of "production before politics." His hand may be visible making the first small gestures of a softer approach towards the Soviet Union (behind the usual convincing display of vituperation.) It was noticeable already six weeks ago that Chinese diplomats expelled from Moscow arrived back in Peking without receiving any provocative "heroes' welcome" and last month a Chinese delegation went to Moscow for trade talks, the first contact of its kind since the Sino-Soviet crisis towards the beginning of the year.

But Mao still lives and, as the champion of permanent class struggle, can only regard any compromise with the Russians or revisionists as odious and strictly temporary. Like all masters of compromise, Chou has only brought the conflict out of the open and into the house. The three-cornered alliance is in fact a furtive three-cornered struggle. And if Liu Shao-chi is eliminated as the enemy without, Chou may find himself next on the list of scapegoats as the enemy within.

His former deputy minister of labor, Mackenzie King, will accompany him on the visit.

Nasser's Influence Spreading

By PETER HUGHES

BEIRUT—Under the astute guidance of President Nasser, the Egyptian "revolution" is spreading through the Arabian Peninsula.

Most of Nasser's key men have impeccable credentials. His protege for South Arabia is the last Aden chief minister. His protege in Yemen, President Abdulah al Saif, was chief of the Imam's bodyguard, and now his Liberation Front for Saudi Arabia is headed by the deposed King Saud.

This latest recruit to Nasser's Arab Socialism, in a three-day visit to the Egyptian-backed Yemen Republic, not only claimed the throne of his young half-brother, King Feisal, but got a promise of Republican help to put him there.

It is here that Nasser may have made a serious mistake. Saud, who now lives in Cairo with his two sons, while King Saud of Arabia, was the very prototype of all that was rotten in traditional Arab rulers. King Feisal, when he took the throne in 1964, passed for a reformer, stopping the wastage of the country's oil wealth in foreign night spots, and putting more of it into home development.

But Saud could be a dangerous figurehead, for in the desert wastes of Saudi Arabia he has a tribal following which, though impossible to estimate, must make Feisal anxious about sabotage of American-owned oil facilities.

It is precisely this new threat to Saudi Arabia which makes the arrest of two U.S. officials in Taiz the most significant happening in the area since Britain's pledge just over a year ago that she would leave South Arabia.

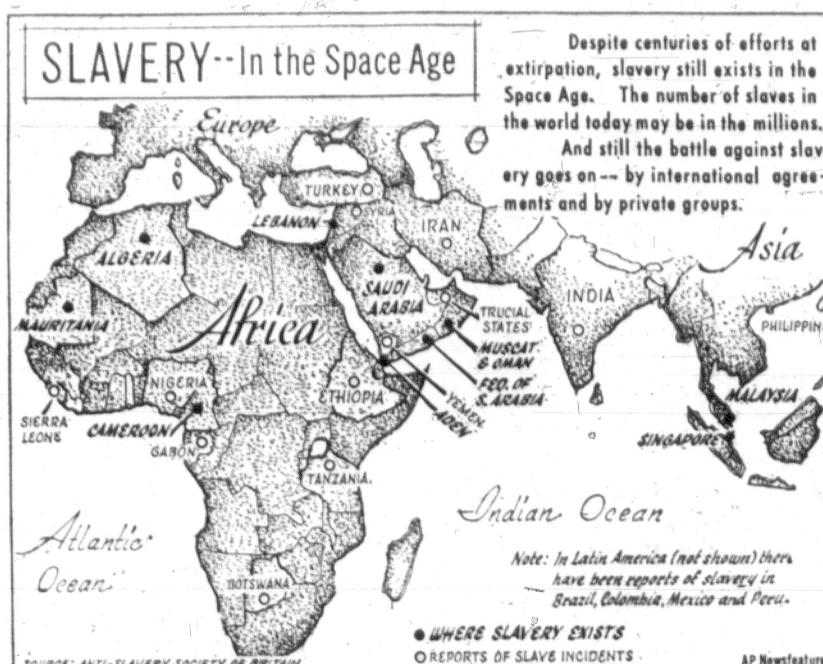

Reports from the Egyptian News Agency and in the Egyptian semi-official newspaper Al Ahram, said two U.S. Agency for International Development officials, named as Steve Elias and Harold Hartman, were being interrogated for their alleged part in a bazooka attack on an ammunition dump in the southern capital of Taiz.

The unconfirmed Egyptian reports of the arrests blamed the mission for sabotage with Yemen. Furthermore, the reports said that the American charge d'affaires in Taiz had threatened that the U.S. would withdraw recognition from the Republican regime.

The United States is one of the few Western states to recognize the Republican regime. Recognition came in line with American feeling that President Nasser was the only Arab leader who could stop the spread of Communism in the Arabian Peninsula. At that time Saud was ruling in Saudi Arabia, and he refused to recognize the Republicans—as did the British.

Since then the state department has found that little to benefit the U.S. can be got from President Nasser, and it has been embarrassed by the war in Yemen. United States wheat aid to Egypt has not been renewed, but still Nasser continues to spread revolution. And the U.S. becomes increasingly concerned.

Anti-Slavery Fight Still Going Strong

By MICHAEL CODEL

LONDON — Slavery — man's ancient system of owning other men — remains a Space Age problem.

Britain's Anti-Slavery Society, which calls itself "the principal organization in the world working specifically to end slavery," can only roughly estimate the world's slave population. It is at least in the hundreds of thousands, possibly millions.

The society works out of a chill, dingy office near London's Victoria Station. Presiding over desks cluttered with reports, maps and papers is a natty retired British Army paratrooper, Col. Patrick Montgomery, 53.

He's been fighting slavery four years now, and says he got into the field "just by reading an interesting book on the subject, that's all." The book was "Slavery" by Charles Greenidge.

Slow Going

But Montgomery admits that he has had slow going on the hundreds of old, leather-bound volumes that line his office, all dealing with slavery.

Col. Montgomery is a lobbyist on a world scale. It is his aim to convince foreign governments to abide by the 1926 Geneva Convention on the Abolition of Slavery and the Slave Trade, its 1956 supplementary convention, and the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights.

He carries on his fight in the conference halls of Geneva and New York, through the mails, by personal contact, and now through an ever-increasing press coverage. The society survives on private contributions, but not enough to prevent a deficit.

The society, founded in 1823, used to work quietly. Its main method was to try to convince governments that permitting slavery was a moral wrong and that they should be ashamed to allow it. Over the years, through public protest, economic change, and, in the case of America, civil war, slavery as an institution ended in the Western world.

But the problem remains in about 25 countries, mostly in the north tropical zone, and predominantly Moslem.

Col. Montgomery flatly cates incidents of slavery in Aden and the Federation of South Arabia, Algeria, Cameroon, Lebanon, Mauritania, Malaysia, Singapore, Saudi Arabia, and Muscat and Oman.

Old information comes from Colombia, Peru, and Syria. "Other reports" come from Botswana, Brazil, Ethiopia, Gabon, India, Iran, Mexico, Nigeria, Philippines, Sierra Leone, Tanzania, the Trucial States, the Persian Gulf, Turkey and Yemen.

Here are some examples from society reports:

'Benevolent'

Aden—Sheiks and emirs in western Aden own slaves openly. The British government is empowered to offer "mandatory advice" on this type of matter, but society pleads have been answered that such slavery as survives is entirely benevolent and so-called slaves are not held against their will.

Algeria — A French school teacher believed there to be about 2,000 slaves around Tamanarasset.

Cameroun — A chief, the Lamido of Ngauandere, owns several thousand slaves.

Lebanon and Singapore — Children sold to brothels.

Saudi Arabia — Slave owners indemnified $3,000 apiece for 1,700 freed slaves, but about 100,000 slaves are still believed held by local rulers.

Muscat and Oman — Slavery remains legal.

Colombia — A group of Brazilian Indians was allegedly enticed into slavery by a Colombian rubber grower.

Botswana — During 1963 the police looked into 49 cases of kidnapping for slavery. The Eastern Nigeria "bride price" system continues.

Philippines — Slavery reported among the Moros, an Arab-descended people.

$1,800 Each

Sierra Leone — A society member quoted the price of a male slave at $1,800. This occurs in the interior. The coast of Sierra Leone was settled by slaves freed by the British.

A few European girls are known to have been kidnapped under "mysterious circumstances," says Col. Montgomery, but these are covered by another convention and another society. The Anti-Slavery Society plans to take a closer look into it.

The society deplores alleged slave labor conditions behind the Iron Curtain, but feels it can best concentrate on cleaning up the West, where such systems are not carried out as state policy.

The Anti-Slavery Society's immediate goal is the establishment of an international body to put teeth into the conventions.

Unfortunately, says Col. Montgomery, too many developing nations, including convention signatories, are either hesitant to disturb traditional practices or feel that South African apartheid is the only form of "slavery" in question at the moment.

The action is that calls for action keep being sent to "committee." And the society keeps plugging away.

The Machinery Overload In Canada's Parliament

By GERALD WARING

OTTAWA — A great deal will be heard about the "crisis in Parliament" during this new session that commenced yesterday, for it is already obvious that Parliament has more work ahead of it than it can handle this year under present operating procedures.

The crisis is simply one of machinery overload. The machinery sufficed in the days of low taxes, low spending and government adherence to a policy of laissez-faire. It has long since ceased to suffice in the era of high taxation, high spending, and government involvement in major aspects of every citizen's day to day life such as health and social security, and state economic planning and direction.

The MPs are well aware of the problem. They have reduced the overload strain on the 19th century machinery of Parliament by such devices as streamlining parliamentary rules and practices, and giving more work and responsibility to Commons committees.

But this is only tinkering with the works—an oil and ball bearing technique that increased efficiency and production, but not by a wide enough margin to keep pace with the constantly increasing overload placed on the machinery by a go-go government. Consequence: continuing crisis.

As the session starts, the MPs are concentrating on tightening up nuts and bolts following Prime Minister Pearson's call for all-party co-operation in reaching agreement on time limits for debates on individual pieces of legislation.

This activity may be fairly successful, for a lot of the nuts are loose indeed, and even opposition MPs have special incentive this

Hardening Line on Dissent Threat to U.S. Democracy

By RICHARD N. GOODWIN

(Mr. Goodwin is a former special White House assistant to both Presidents Johnson and Kennedy.)

If we are willing to concede the sincerity of those who are actually killing human beings, and some of the press, to treat dissent on its merits; to view it as a reflection of conscience and conviction, and to examine it, not for motive, but for its intellectual force, relevance and truth.

Does Sen. Fulbright challenge our foreign policy? Immediately the mutterings begin that he is a "bad" foreign relations committee chairman, doesn't control his committee or, even worse, is lazy.

And so it goes. Sen. Wayne Morse is a "wild man." Intellectuals are cowardly or alienated or don't like Texans. (Except for those in government who, presumably, are brave, committed and in love with Texas.)

Nothing is more depressing about today's Washington than the mounting reluctance of the official community, and some of the press, to treat dissent on its merits; to view it as a reflection of conscience and conviction, and to examine it, not for motive, but for its intellectual force, relevance and truth.

Special School for the Bright?

Ted Gaskell Talks To
... JOHN EDWARDS

John Edwards' mild manner and soft voice give the impression that, even with provocation, he would not be easily annoyed.

But inside the man there is anger that comes out quietly but firmly when he talks about society, the educational system and politicians.

R. John C. Edwards is the University of Victoria's first Rhodes Scholar. He will study English literature at Oxford College, Oxford, in the coming year after a summer course at Edinburgh.

The son of an affluated power commission official, John Edwards was born in England, raised in the Channel Islands and educated in high school here and eventually university where he has been for the past four years.

His education in the Channel Islands was at a private school in Jersey.

And after that, the B.C. school system proved disappointing, to say the least.

He deplores the system which grades children according to age in schools.

"It presumes that all children progress at the same rate."

Frustration

It's bad for bright students and poor students. It produces boredom and frustration. A doesn't get in public schools."

The alternative is what he particularly bright student can be bored and his attitude can produce an adverse effect on other students, Mr. Edwards thinks.

He prefers the private school system which enables teachers to teach classes of about 13 students and is not co-educational.

"This avoids the social problems which arise through having girls and boys in the same class."

Minister To Meet With Group

Welfare Minister Dan Campbell will meet with members of the Low Income Co-Operative of Greater Victoria May 25, to discuss a brief prepared by the group.

The brief proposes payment of rent and moving subsidies, additional clothing allowances, allowances for nursery schools, recreation such as that offered by the YMCA, and treatment of welfare applicants with respect and concern.

It also asks for a study of a guaranteed minimum income, subsidies up to $100 monthly for babysitting and transportation to prevent a net loss of income when a family head goes to work and a babysitter must be paid out of a small income.

Low Income Co-Operative is a 56-member group of persons receiving welfare benefits.

YACHT RACE PLANNED

Turkey Head Club Names First Slate

A new yacht club was officially born Monday evening when the Turkey Head Sailing Association held its first election at the Oak Bay Marina.

Dick James, veteran yachtsman and principal of the North Ward Elementary School who organized the group originally formed to promote winter sailing in the Oak Bay area, was elected the association's first commodore.

Peter Ferguson is vice-commodore, Charlie Pash, fleet captain and Dennis Roberts, secretary-treasurer.

Representing the various class yachts in competition are: cruising classes, Glen Higgins; Thunderbirds, Rod McBride; Haidas, Don McCowan; Sharks, John McDonald, and Cal 208, George Dufour.

The name of the new yacht club was chosen because most of the group's races are sailed off Turkey Head, the point on which the marina is located.

SUBMIT DESIGNS

Commodore James announced that a competition will be held in which members will submit designs for a club burgee.

One design has already been entered. It features the red head of a gobbler, superimposed on a gold background.

It was decided the spring and summer seasons will be organized to provide programs of racing and cruising.

The first race will take place off the marina this coming Saturday at 1 p.m. Weather permitting, it is hoped to have

DEMOCRACY PROMISED TO GREEKS

ATHENS (UPI) — Greeks were promised today a return to parliamentary rule as soon as a "modernized" constitution is approved by the nation's voters.

Interior Minister Stylianos Pattakos, a brigadier-general who played a key role in the April 21 coup, announced the proposed plebiscite on constitutional reform Monday but did not set a date for the vote.

Pattakos also warned that anyone found writing anti-government slogans on walls or distributing Communist literature would be shot without trial.

STRASBOURG, France (UPI) — The European Parliament, forum for legislators from the six Common Market countries, warned Greece Monday it risks losing its association with the economic community unless it restores democratic rule.

DON'T SHOOT TSAR CANNON WHILE DRUNK

MOSCOW (UPI) — For the Soviets, recent U.S. State Department warnings to Americans touring Russia are one big laugh.

The Soviet newspaper Literazhnye Gazety scoffed today at the State Department warning and issued a few tongue-in-cheek warnings of its own:

— Do not take away the Tsar Cannon from the Kremlin.

— Do not shoot elephants in the Moscow Zoo.

— Do not swim in the Moscow river without bathing suits or while drunk.

— Anybody who breaks these rules will naturally be arrested and exiled to Siberia, it said.

Water Main Bid Rejected

Residents of West Latoria Road, in Metchosin, had their application for a water main rejected Monday by the Greater Victoria Water District Board.

Chief Commissioner Ron Upward said the expenditure of $25,000 to supply 16 houses with water could not be justified.

The residents had stated they could not afford to pay the $12.65 a month required to repay the money required to install the main.

They stated in a letter to the board they felt $10 a month within their reach.

But Mr. Upward reported the rate of repayment was a hard and fast rule which should not be changed.

"If $12.65 is too high for them, then possibly $10 a month would also prove too much," he said.

"Apart from that we can only run into trouble if we depart from the established principles," Mr. Upward added. "We have to stay with the standard we have established in the past."

The board agreed and decided to hold to the $12.65 a month until the debt is repaid.

SPECIAL CASE

In other business the board agreed to donate $100 to the Langford ambulance driver.

Mr. Upward said it is not normal for the board to make donations but stressed that this is a special case.

"We call on the Langford ambulance in the event of injury in the watershed," he said. "And they have always provided excellent service."

The board also approved the expenditure of $995 for a special shingle saw which will be used to eliminate flared cedar butts from the watershed.

BETTER THAN BURNING

"We have a choice between buying the saw and using the butts for shingles — or of burning the butts," Mr. Upward said.

Mayor Dobson said he was using his veto because passing such a motion was no way to instill confidence in investment money.

He said K. and R. Enterprises had acted in good faith.

Council could not flatly rezone this property because the company is having financial difficulties.

Mayor Dobson said: "If this resolution went through we would have an awful time convincing people that this council is working to protect ratepayers' interests."

He undertook to ask the company for an explanation of the delay in developing the site.

Ald. Barney Cocks said council should be trying to help the firm out of its troubles instead of heaping coals of fire on them.

Several trees have been cut down and others have been pulled out, he told council.

LADYSMITH — An 80-acre estate in the Holland Creek area is to be developed by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Town council learned Monday CMHC will build on 50 lots within a 10-acre building area and develop the balance of the land as parks and gardens.

The corporation was invited to develop the area because of the severe housing shortage in Ladysmith.

Michael Shogan, 20, died when his sports car collided head-on with a convertible on the Nanoose Flats, 15 miles north of Nanaimo. Eight other people were injured.

Passenger in the sports car, Keith Burley, fractured his skull when he was thrown from the car as it left the road and crashed on to the railway tracks.

The seven occupants of the convertible were injured but were released from hospital after treatment.

Police said the driver was Brian K. Roberts, 21, of Wellington. Passengers were Sharon Scheibel, Robert Cherry, Robert Campbell, Gail Bondie, Lawrence Bryson, and David Peffers, all of Nanaimo.

Funeral services for Michael Shogan will be conducted Thursday.

Coroner Russ Inkster has withdrawn from the inquest because one of the eight injured people, David Peffers, is a relative of Mrs. Inkster.

LOOKS AT SPORTS

When the J. F. Kennedy Memorial soccer cup was put in the back seat of Frank Grealy's car Sunday night (it's so large they had to open a window) the agony and ecstasy belonged to the coach of Victoria O'Keefes.

Grealy is in the new style of coaches, soft-spoken but firm, sincere and straightforward, rarely emotional. Or if he is, it doesn't blaze out in neon lights.

When he took over Victoria United three years ago they weren't burning the town. Or the Pacific Coast Soccer League. This is not a rap at Wallace Milligan, a warm, friendly man. Victoria just didn't put all the pills in the holes all the time.

They did. Saturday and Sunday, for Grealy.

When they took the Kennedy mug Grealy's faith in them and their's in him was vindicated. (When they took the cup into their dressing room at Empire Stadium there wasn't a lone member from the Pacific Coast Soccer League executive or the B.C. Soccer Commission to shake their hands or contribute a flagon of champagne.)

O'Keefes faces were red from excitement and delight. The mugs of officialdom shone red from embarrassment. They hadn't expected O'Keefes to represent Canada. That's putting it mildly. They didn't want them.

Sheepherders Showed Their Prejudices.

O'Keefes were given enough funds only for one night in Vancouver. They had to pay their own way there and back. The Mexicans, Los Angelinos and San Franciscans all lived on the league and commission expense account.

This was part of Frank Grealy's agony, the knowledge that O'Keefes weren't treated as equals. The knowledge that the commission and the PCSL sheepherders flagrantly and openly wanted Columbus to represent Canada because of its vast and vocal Italian support.

A contingent of Victorians attended the games and were surrounded by this knothead ethnic contingent.

Their constant hissing and boozing of the Victoria players started Saturday and continued through most of Sunday's championship final.

"Some of the wives," Frank Grealy was saying Tuesday, "hadn't heard it before and couldn't believe it. One of the ladies threatened to hit one of them over the head with her handbag."

Reporter Jim Hume heard it and didn't care for it. Finally he turned to three loud-lunged bazookas behind him and said, "Don't you realize you're not boozing Victoria. You're boozing Canada — your country."

Brett Sliced Open—Menzie Spat Upon

The Italians stopped only long enough to catch their breath and start in again. Hume was about to tell them to put their prejudices you-know-where when his 16-year-old son, his youthful wisdom showing through, said, "Ignore them — they just crumps."

I asked Grealy if the hoots bothered his players. "In the heat of the game I wouldn't say so," he said. "But they were aware of them."

His agony was compounded (and the credulity of Canadian supporters strained) by the fact that on the field it was the Mexicans who played the "bad guy" role with a particular dedication.

The Mexicans came with four international players (that's Grade A, madam) and short fuses.

The right fullback, twice fainted out of his drawers by Martin Taylor, tripped him.

Peter Brett took the ball off a Mexican, booted it upfield and had his left knee sliced open by a kick.

Jim Menzie was a recipient of some Mexican saliva — right in the face.

"They took it," Grealy says, with obvious pride. "I don't know that I could have."

Stothard and Soutar Hardly the Matia

If you flout the Marquis of Queensbury rules in soccer you don't get 30 days or your licence suspended. The referee writes your name in a little book. Five Mexicans were "named" against two Victorians.

Which two?

"Dave Stothard and Bert Soutar," Grealy said, trying to suppress a grin. Stothard and Soutar are so gentlemanly they don't even give their wives dirty looks.

"Soutar," Grealy said, "was named for pacing off a kick. The Mexicans had moved the ball — it's supposed to be 10 yards but it was only five — and Bert walked it off. When the referee fingered him, Bert just threw up his hands."

The ecstasy for Frank Grealy was in taking a club he didn't originally think would go far all the way to the top of the hill.

"At the beginning of the season," Grealy said, "I thought we might finish in the cellar. I looked over the juniors but there wasn't much there. Then we picked up those five players — by letter mostly — and we worked."

Jim Menzie, Tom Westwater, Peter Brett, Jeff Sweet and Ed Carson came to O'Keefes special delivery. Joe Alexis came late and scored the winning goal Sunday.

Grealy wanted to play a certain pattern against Mexico, a pattern that demanded fielding a team which did not include at the outset the brilliant Brett.

Grealy Knows 'Agony and the Ecstasy'

Grealy had added Bob Hazeldine and Bob Smith from Columbus (by decision of the players and the executive).

"I walked the streets Sunday, thinking about it," Grealy said. "I didn't want to drop Peter, but I had to."

When he told Brett, the young man said, "I know. I'm the only one you could have dropped in the circumstances."

Brett came on later — when Menzie was injured — and played well although the aggressive style Grealy demanded is not his forte.

Hazeldine, sometimes rough and always aggressive, blended in ideally and immediately. In the opening minutes he went for a header against two Mexicans "with no hope of getting the ball."

"But he's the kind of player," Grealy was saying, "who goes for the ball. The next thing I saw — it happened in front of our bench — was the Mexicans spread out and Hazeldine with the ball."

Hazeldine fitted in so well with centre half Bill Hamilton that a questioner asked later, "How long have you two played together?"

Hazeldine looked at Hamilton. Without blinking he said, "Four years."

When they write the final chapter of Frank Grealy's "Agony and Ecstasy" Victorians should forget about those Vancouver sheepherders and spread around a few medals.

Victoria city council may have the idea in mind. And the biggest one should go the guy who experienced both sides of the coin.

Frank Grealy.

O'Keefes' Pilots Calling It a Day

Grealy, Magee Plan To Retire

By Ernie Fedoruk

The Kennedy Cup-winning Victoria O'Keefes may have a new manager and coach next soccer season.

While Victoria fans were still lauding O'Keefes' weekend victory in the international tournament at Vancouver, manager Fred Magee and coach Frank Grealy both indicated Monday they intend to step down from their piloting positions.

Of the two, Magee's intended resignation is the most definite.

Both cited the same reasons. Direction of the Pacific Coast Soccer League team, they said, is becoming too much of a time-consuming task.

Magee had informed club president Ron Southern last January that this would be his last tenure as manager.

'Wouldn't Be Fair'

"I just can't find the time," said Fred. "If I were to continue and not devote the proper amount of time that job requires, it would be unfair to the players, the fans and the league."

Grealy almost echoed Magee's sentiments verbatim, but did leave the door open for a possible return.

"When I took the job as coach, I said it would be only for three years. This is the third year."

"Mind you, I haven't thought about it too much lately. I'll talk it over with my wife before I make a final decision."

Grealy also added: "Make no mistake, I hate the idea of giving it up. On the other hand, you have to have new ideas injected into a team. So a change might prove to be very beneficial."

Big Shoes To Fill

If either or both do step aside, their successors might find the Grealy-Magee act a tough one to follow. In addition to winning the Kennedy Cup with a 2-1 victory over Mexico Selects on Sunday, O'Keefes finished first in the PCSL to give Victoria fans one of their greatest seasons ever.

Magee, incidentally, may remain with the club in a less-demanding capacity.

The season for O'Keefes has not yet ended, so it will be "back to work" for the players tonight.

Grealy has scheduled workouts tonight and Thursday and a practice game Saturday "to keep 'em running" in preparation for Chelsea's visit May 30.

The English Cup finalists will play O'Keefes in a match that will mark the opening of the new Royal Athletic Park.

Saturday's friendly match for O'Keefes will be against Canadian Scottish of the District League's first division. The match, starting at 1 p.m., will be played at Lansdowne Junior High.

HOME GARDEN

Make Sure Tomatoes Not Out Overnight

By HILDA BEASTALL

Home gardeners who are raising their own tomato plants from seed, will now have them growing well, but the nights are still too cool for planting outdoors.

The plants are possibly six or eight inches tall and should be strong and healthy if enough light, space and air have been provided.

If the garden is in a situation which remains cool until the end of May, it would be a good plan to Hilda put each plant into a five-inch pot of well rotted compost.

This will enable it to continue growing without being checked, and the whole batch of plants can be moved outdoors each morning and again at dusk to an unheated place.

If vine ripened tomatoes are considered a necessary part of your summer meals, this amount of trouble will not seem too much. The plants need to make their growth early, set their fruits in June and produce the first ripened tomatoes before the end of July.

This can be managed if the early ripening varieties have been chosen.

Around the 24th of May, or at latest during the last week of the month, there usually comes a spell of warmer weather, with warmer nights.

To leave the tomato plants out for the first night, choose one which is overcast or even with a warm gentle rain.

A quiet, brilliant, starlit night in May will often end in an almost frosty dawn which might damage your carefully raised plants.

Island Singers,

Pass to Finals

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Cream of Vancouver Island talent in so far as three local music festivals were concerned assembled in Victoria Monday for a semi-final round leading to provincial finals in Vancouver June 9, 10 and 11.

The Victoria semi-final was one of four to be held representing the areas of Northern B.C., Okanagan and Kootenays, Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island.

Centennial classes in Nanaimo, Cowichan and Victoria music festivals provided the winners who competed Monday afternoon and evening at First United Fellowship Hall and Central Junior Secondary Auditorium.

Provincial final winners may proceed to the National Centenary Music Festival at Saint John, N.B., in July.

The two adjudicators who will judge in all four provincial regions, were Mrs. Phyllis Schuld, piano and vocal, and Captain Leonard Campin, strings, wind, band and orchestra.

COMPETITOR

As Mrs. Schuld — who is on the faculty of University of British Columbia department of music — pointed out: "At this level we have to be much more critical, marks are harder to get when the standard is so high."

To proceed further each entrant had to obtain a written recommendation from the adjudicator whether or not they had a competitor.

Mrs. Schuld recommended Penelope Bevan for her singing of two Canadian compositions and Capt. Campin recommended John Rigby for his violin solo performance.

SOLO PLAYING

Capt. Campin, who is director of music for the Royal Canadian Engineers' Band, and conductor of the Vancouver Metropolitan and Okanagan Symphony Orchestras, was deeply impressed with the quality of the solo playing of five wind instrument soloists.

"These were such musical performances," he commented on the playing of Corinne Dunn, French horn; Ian Franklin, oboe; Howard Mar (Nanaimo), trumpet; Donald Mayer, clarinet; and Donna Zapf, bass clarinet.

Gravity
Near Pole

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian scientific expedition dropped a navigation device to the floor of the Arctic ocean near the North Pole Monday and officials of the Dominion Observatory said experiments are proceeding satisfactorily.

The seven-man team was able to drop the sonar capsule through a hole in an ice floe on which it is camped for a week and then chart the movement of the floe by homing-in on the device.

The expedition, led by Dr. J. R. (Hans) Weber, a Dominion Observatory geophysicist from Ottawa, was flown Saturday to the ice floe about 20 miles from the Pole. The floe drifted towards the Pole and then away from it in an erratic manner.

While precise measurements have not been computed, it is believed the capsule is 30 or 40 miles from the Pole. An official said it wasn't necessary to drop the capsule precisely on the Pole, so long as scientists knew its location within about 100 feet for navigation purposes.

STUDY GRAVITY

The team, including three Americans, will spend about a week surveying the gravity pull of the earth near the Pole, and the location of the Pole in relation to earth satellites and planets.

Scientists have long known that the earth wobbles on its axis. The precise measurements to be made this week should indicate the nature and extent of the wobble — whether the North Pole moves in a regular circle in space, or whether it is erratic.

They will make oceanographic studies and try to determine the shape of the earth at the Pole. Officials explained scientists run into strange problems with precise measurements at the Pole.

For one thing, the pull of gravity at the Pole is not at right angles to the level of the earth. This means the sea at the Pole is not level.

Two Small Boys

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two 10-year-old boys died as a result of a fire Saturday in an abandoned car near their home in suburban Surrey.

Dead are Gregory Allan Gjestrup, who was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital after the accident, and Daniel Robert Bissett, who died early Sunday morning.

Witnesses told police there was a muffled explosion from the car before it broke into flames.

Rescuers pulled the boys from the burning wreckage. Police said some partially-filled gasoline cans were found to have been in the car.

MARRIED in mini-skirt Monday was 26-year-old actress Ann-Margret. Her husband is Roger Smith, 32-year-old television actor. Couple were married in Las Vegas, had a steak dinner and then returned to Burbank, Calif.

VAN NUYS, Calif. (UPI) — A 16-year-old sniper shot a rookie police officer to death Monday night in a dark playground and, in turn, was killed during a gun battle with other officers, police said.

The young sniper, 225-pound, 6 feet, 1-inch William McKinley Miller of Van Nuys, had been arrested a number of times, most recently Sunday night by juvenile officers for glue sniffing, officers said.

Dead are Gregory Allan Gjestrup, who was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital after the accident, and Daniel Robert Bissett, who died early Sunday morning.

MESSAGE FROM 'DEAD MAN'

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A California woman told a Superior Court judge Monday that only persons who had communicated with the legally dead James Kidd should be allowed to share in his $200,000 estate.

The court began probating the will of the Miami, Ariz., miner who disappeared in 1950, leaving an unusual will.

Superior Court Judge Robert Myers ruled that his court has jurisdiction to decide where the money should go and he set June 6 to start hearing presentations from 74 claimants.

Kidd's will leaves the estate to the person or persons who can prove the existence of a human soul that leaves the body at death.

Girlie Magazines
Are Not Obscene

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whatever may be the U.S. Supreme Court's going definition of obscenity, and there are several, Monday's ruling is this: highly subjective area makes one thing clear: Girlie magazines are not obscene.

Undoubtedly this is cheering news for sellers of such publications, just as it is displeasing to those who consider girlie magazines corrupting.

But perhaps equally significant is what the decision does not do: Lay down a rule on whether retailers may be prosecuted under state obscenity laws when they claim they were largely unaware of a suspect publication's contents.

The court's definition of obscenity is no clearer than it was in March, 1966, the last time it delivered a major pronouncement on the subject and upheld the conviction of Eros magazine publisher Ralph Ginzburg.

The convictions of Robert Redrup, a New York City newsstand operator who sold two racy paperbacks to a policeman, and of William Austin, who sold girlie magazines in his Paducah, Ky., bookstore, were thrown out Monday because a majority of the nine judges found their prosecutions in connection with the first amendment guaranteeing free speech.

At least four different constitutional views of obscenity were presented in the unsigned opinion but none was singled out as controlling in the Redrup and Austin cases.

When the court took on the cases more than a year ago it specifically refused to pass judgment on whether the magazines and the two paperbacks were legally obscene.

Instead, it said it would decide procedural issues, including the question of knowledge of contents.

The court acted then, it said Monday, "upon the hypothesis that the material involved in each case was of a character described as obscene in the constitutional sense."

"But," it said, "we have concluded that the hypothesis upon which the court originally proceeded was invalid."

SCHOLAR

India Picks Moslem President

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Zaki Husain, a mild-mannered scholar, today was chosen as India's first Moslem president in an electoral landslide.

The candidate of the ruling Congress party, Husain received 471,244 votes giving him an easy victory over the main opposition candidate, former chief justice Koka Subba Rao, who received 363,971 votes.

The election of the 70-year-old Husain, who has been vice-president under President Sarvapalli Radakrishnan, was a victory for Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and her government.

Husain was elected by the Electoral College, made up of members of the central Parliament and state legislatures.

In the balloting, each vote was given a different weight according to population in the voter's constituency. Thus, while only about 4,000 MPs and state legislators voted, the vote total went over 700,000.

Pill Dangerous For Young Girls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said today that birth control pills can prove harmful to young girls whose bone growth is not complete.

They tend to bring about bone closure, stunting bone growth, the agency said.

Beer in Hand Cost Accused Fine of $50

The case revolved around a glass of beer sitting on the downtown sidewalk.

It began early April 15 when police saw some people stroll from a Johnson Street hotel with glasses of beer in hand.

When Frank Hird, 22, of 468 Obed, saw the officers he set his glass down and fled back to the beverage room.

The officers waited. Eventually Hird returned, picked up the glass and began walking up the street.

He was fined $50 Monday when he pleaded guilty to consuming liquor in a public place. But not before protesting he was not actually "consuming" in public.

"What were you doing with the beer?" asked Magistrate Ostler.

"Carrying it."

"For what purpose? To water the boulevard trees?"

Hird said he was heading for his car to take it home. He declined a chance to change his plea to not guilty.

Also fined $50 on a similar charge arising from the same incident was Ronald West, 19, of 453 Creed Rd. He was fined an additional $25 for being a minor in possession of liquor.

Oak Bay's role as a residential area with comparatively little commercial development is reflected in its annual budget.

The city of Victoria, for example, gets only $8,500,000 of its $15,750,000 annual budget in taxes and $3,300,000 in government grants.

The ratio is different in Oak Bay.

The municipality receives $2,605,589 of its $3,226,019 budget in taxes and less than $500,000 in government grants and contributions.

Its revenue from licences and permits is small. Only $49,920 is anticipated this year.

Oak Bay will get $11,000 in rents and franchises; nearly $20,000 in interest and tax penalties.

The budgeters apparently expect to see Oak Bay more law-abiding this year. In 1966, $28,000 was collected in fines. This year only $25,000 is anticipated.

The municipality expects a profit of $21,068 on its $239,941 water revenue but this and a little more will be absorbed by the $23,428 for regional district expenses which includes the half mill, about $21,000, for regional parks.

The school board will get the biggest slice of the budget pie with $1,206,420 going for education. Protection to persons and property will cost just over $50,000.

General capital and loan fund will have $308,000 and this includes purchase of equipment, and $91,000 for new roads and sidewalks. This is in addition to $181,000 for public work maintenance.

General running of the municipality will require $157,133. Health will cost $64,114 and welfare $84,223.

Sanitation and waste removal will cost $170,000.

The budget also includes a contingency fund for $89,715 to take care of grants on an intermunicipal basis, publicity and other items.

The 1966 budget was $2,858,313 with $962,427 going for schools. The mill rate then was 50.88. This year it is 57.71, as reported earlier.

FIREPROOF
Next Flight
Of Apollo
Set in '68

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. space chief James Webb announced today the first manned flight of the three-man Apollo spacecraft will take place early next year.

He told the Senate space committee the crew for the initial flight will be U.S. Navy Capt. Walter M. Schirra, Walter Cunningham and Maj. Donn F. Eisele of the U.S. Air Force. Cunningham is a civilian.

They were the back-up crew for the three astronauts who died in a fire on a launching pad at Cape Kennedy in January.

Webb said a fireproofed new Apollo spacecraft has been designed. It will be delivered to Cape Kennedy late this year and launched three months later.

Most of the combustible materials that were involved in the January tragedy will be replaced and piping and wiring will be improved.

Webb, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, indicated the agency still hopes to land an American astronaut on the moon toward the end of 1969.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paddy Neale, Vancouver labor council secretary, Monday announced he will seek election to the executive of the International Woodworkers of America if the United States immigration department will permit him.

The 46-year-old union executive served a jail sentence for contempt of court arising from a labor dispute at a suburban Burnaby electrical plant last year.

"I have a criminal record and there's no getting around that," said Mr. Neale. "But it should not stand in my way because it is not a crime of moral turpitude."

He said he believes he will get the clearance he needs if he has to live at IWA headquarters in Portland.

The western Canada section of the IWA, with 50,000 members, is the largest single regional in the international, but has never had a man on the international executive. Mr. Neale has been mentioned as a possible candidate for second vice-president.

Jack Hoof, supervisor, said there were 23 qualifying mature cows out of 32, and eight qualifying two-year-olds out of 11.

Cowichan Creamery award for the month went to Norman Quist, Westholme, with his two-year-old Holstein "Gilmore Amilia Supreme," producing 12,981 pounds of milk and 499 pounds of fat.

Mr. G. A. Baumgart had the highest herd average of 1,655 pounds of milk and 67.2 pounds of fat.

Arthur Mayse

On Monday I listened to a mother and then, an hour or so later, to a father whose accounts were in certain respects the same. Each centred around a teen-ager who had dropped out of school and left home. And in both cases, in the world beyond the disciplines they fled, an enemy of youth and promise was waiting.

Marijuana is its now-familiar name.

It is non-addictive in the physical sense, a fact of which we are frequently reminded by those who would legalize its use. But it seems, nonetheless, to have helped the boy and the girl foul up their lives.

The girl was a good student, the boy poor in classes, but with gifts that society could have used. Instead, with the pleasant thief of ambition to assist, they have joined the opt-outs-of society.

I do not doubt that other factors contributed to the change these two have undergone. But marijuana played its part, substituting comfortable illusion for a hurtful reality.

As one who believes that realities should be faced, not retreated from, I take an extremely square position in the matter of narcotics-inspired creeds and cults which provide false gospel for the gullible.

The assumption back of them is that you, I, and the other squares have got the world into a horrible mess, and that the new generation has no recourse but to withdraw from it into a nirvana where all will be well.

This, of course, is pure rhetoric, though it makes good hearing to the weak, the ineffectual and the chronically disatisfied.

That the world has its grave troubles, none of us can deny. But I cannot see that retreat into a shadowland of narcotic delusion is likely to provide any solutions worth having.

Neither do the great majority of our young people — and for this, we can be profoundly glad. It is they, not the apostles of banned narcotics who will provide the answers we need in a world which has yet to learn how to live up to its racing technology.

These are the boys and girls who do not drop out, and because they are our chief hope, I think we should protect them from the nihilist fringe by all means at our command.

It has been alleged in this regard, that the users and advocates of marijuana and other narcotics have penetrated into our schools. If this is so — and if it isn't, we are luckier than most — we cannot afford the luxury of complacency.

I think we have indulged ourselves too far in that direction already. We have also strained tolerance in this matter of trafficking in illicit pick-providers to the limit.

We have heard too much glib patter to the effect that the only thing wrong with marijuana smoking is the rap, and we have had it over-impressed upon us that the trade in narcotics is a sort of between-friends arrangement.

Up to a point, no doubt it is. However, the friendship does seem to have its price; and despite all disclaimers to the contrary, I suspect that marijuana is being pushed into this city and all other North American centres by men who make high profits from the trade.

A lot of us have been too casual and too lax about the creeping evil that has come, among us.

I think it's time we reminded ourselves that no matter how lulling the propaganda pitch, the smoking of marijuana is unequivocally against the law.

I am for that law, and am not of a mind to extend sympathy to those who break it.

CAST IN THE SAME ROLE with broken legs are Ted Iwanowski, of 338 Rithet Street, and the family dog Trixi. Mr. Iwanowski returned from long stay in hospital to be greeted by Trixi, who broke front left leg in April. Both felt sympathetic, remembering the old saying: 'Let he who is without casts among you . . .' (Bill Halkett photo.)

UNION BATTLE

Showdown Vote Called at Mill

A representation vote will be held among employees of the Gold River pulp mill to determine which of two unions they want to represent them.

The contenders are the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

The decision to call a vote of the workers was made last week by the Labour Relations Board and disclosed today.

Earlier, the board ruled out the International Woodworkers of America from the certification battle because its applications were not accompanied by signed membership application cards and evidence the workers had paid one month's dues, a requirement of the Labor Relations Act.

For the same reason, the board ruled out the joint IWA-Pulp Sulphite application.

The representation vote date has not been set, but could be next week.

The Gold River mill is nearing completion on the west coast of Vancouver Island. It is expected to go into production this summer.

At present there are about 150 employees. Under the act, the successful union must obtain a majority of the eligible voters regardless of the number who may actually vote.

If the figure of 150 is used, the winning union must get 76 votes or more.

Sun Watch Excites All But the Pros

The new moon moving between the sun and the earth partially eclipsed the sun today but in Victoria only the amateurs were watching.

"I would be surprised if any of us were watching," Dr. K. O. Wright, an astronomer and director of telescopes of the Royal Astronomical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain said Tuesday. "It wasn't really of much scientific interest."

"A total eclipse is," he said,

"because you learn something about the earth's atmosphere. A partial is only interesting as a check on the moon's position."

George Ball, 544 West Madock, an amateur astronomer and director of telescopes of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, watched the eclipse through a four-inch telescope with a sun filter and camera attachment.

He said that at the maximum point a few minutes before 7 a.m. about 54 per cent of the sun's diameter was covered by the moon. The eclipse began about 6:30 a.m., he said, and ended slightly after 7:30 a.m.

Maximum obscurity was over the west coast, increasing northward from the Bay of California to Alaska. Forty per cent was obscured at maximum point in Los Angeles, according to reports from the Griffith Observatory.

Dr. C. H. Crenshaw, Griffith Observatory director, said the best view of the eclipse was in Alaska where 70 per cent of the sun's surface was blocked out.

Only a small portion of the sun was obscured on the east coast.

There will be no total eclipses of the sun visible from Victoria this century. The last partial was in 1963, the next will be in 1971.

Ex-RCMP Man New Chief In Esquimalt

Smart Retires On June 15

By PAUL WILLIAMSON

A former RCMP staff sergeant has been appointed Esquimalt police chief.

Reeve Ray Bryant, chairman of the Esquimalt Police Commission, said today that Earl Sarsiat, 54, will assume duties as police chief June 15.

The new chief is a veteran of 28 years with the RCMP and the old provincial police.

He will succeed James Smart, who is retiring after 25 years on the force.

It is expected that Mr. Sarsiat will be appointed fire chief as well by the council at a later date.

Mr. Sarsiat has had considerable experience in police work in the Victoria area.

AT PRINCE GEORGE

He is also experienced in municipal work and was staff sergeant in charge of the Prince George detachment of the RCMP at his retirement in June, 1966.

During his career, he has instructed police officers in all phases of police work.

Since his retirement he has worked for the British Columbia Auto Association in Campbell River.

Mr. Sarsiat will come to Victoria next week to confer with the reeve and Chief Smart.

Mayor Using Smears, City Lawyer Charges

Flare-Up Follows Speech to Police

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

A Victoria lawyer said today Mayor Hugh Stephen's statements at the annual police inspection contained the elements of a smear campaign and could undermine "the very traditions which underpin our free society".

Dermond Owen-Flood made the statement this morning responding to the mayor's speech Sunday at Memorial Arena.

The mayor said: "Whenever I hear a man refer to this city's police force as a 'Gestapo' or whenever, in the name of freedom, he seeks otherwise to bring into contempt the orderly means by which mankind has learned to govern itself, I say 'watch out for that man'.

His dedication to liberty is the disguise he wears to cloak the subversion which is in his heart."

FINE RECORD

After praising the police for their fine record of arrests the mayor added:

"As we think of the role of the police force in our modern society perhaps we would do well to reflect also upon the debt we owe them — this thin blue line of men who stand at all times between us and the enveloping forces of disorder and social anarchy."

RJH Nurses Receive RN Diplomas and Pins

Forty-eight 1967 graduates of the Royal Jubilee Hospital's school of nursing received their RN diplomas and badges Sunday evening, at a colorful ceremony, held in the Royal Theatre.

In addition, several of the graduates received awards in recognition of outstanding work.

One of the highest awards went to Joy Cheryl Dakin. She was presented with the Robert S. and Patience Day Memorial Scholarship by Wynne H. Day. The award is given for "the highest degree of general proficiency in theoretical and practical work."

Several prizes were received for proficiency in clinical specialties. Anne Marie Kelsey was top in medical nursing. Lynn Edith Robinson in surgical nursing, Corina Ana Falkenberg in obstetrical and gynecological nursing, Marcia Agnes Vine Bell in pediatric nursing and Christine Ann Brownrigg, psychiatric nursing.

Two earlier graduates of the school received special awards for advanced training.

FURTHER EDUCATION

Marilyn Harley Phillips, who is presently attending McGill University, received the School of Nursing Alumni's bursary and Nanci Michelle Dufour, presently on the school's faculty, received the Woman's Auxiliary's Lena Mitchell bursary. She will be enrolling in McGill University in September.

Alex J. Wood, dean of arts and sciences at the University of Victoria, was guest speaker and Linda D. Barker gave the valedictory address. Miss Elizabeth M. Maude-Moore, education director, announced the awards, most of which were presented by Dr. Anderson.

Speakers on the stage included J. Courtney Haddock,

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

Any thoughts that the musical could not be adopted adequately for the home screen will have been dispelled again with the performance of Carousel this weekend.

The ABC-TV version was taken from the Rodgers and Hammerstein stage presentation and starred Robert Goulet, Mary Grover, Pernell Roberts and Marilyn Mason.

The story dealt with a ne'er-do-well carousel barker who gets married, then is killed in a nonsensical criminal act and, in heaven, learns he will have another chance on earth.

The two-hour musical moved well with a proper blend of song, many of them familiar due to exposure over the years.

They were such as You'll Never Walk Alone, This Was a Real Nice Climb, If I Loved You and June is Bustin' Out All Over.

Goulet was properly impressive. He looks at home in a musical as proven by the song fest which launched him to fame and fortune, Camelot.

Of course, he and Marilyn Mason had a major hand last year in the great success of the television adaptation of Brigadoon.

Pernell Roberts, as Jigger Craigin, was as unsavory a character as he was supposed to be. One could hardly imagine the bearded Jigger as the true-blue and straight Adam of Bonanza days.

The presentations of Carousel, Brigadoon, and even Any Get Your Gun, were proof that musicals can be adapted successfully for television.

The trio was capable of erasing that awful Damn Yankees offering of several weeks ago.

TID BITS: Kirk Douglas and Mary Martin will guest star on segments next season of I Dream of Jeannie.

Charles Schulz's Charlie Brown will be seen in his fourth animated color cartoon special on CBC-TV June 7. The special, entitled You're in Love, Charlie Brown, concerns the last days of school, spring, and how one young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of a certain little red-haired girl. It will be seen on CBC-TV five days in advance of U.S. showing.

Good old Charlie and his Peanuts characters do very well. The April 16 Nielsen showed Charlie Brown's All Stars, a repeat baseball kick, second only to the Academy Awards show which drew 65,000,000 viewers.

Chalk up another new character in the Batman series. Singer Pat Collins will entrance the masked crusader with the wiles of a character called Miss Hypnotique.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive products from us? Ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive a gift.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Ann Lyon, age 9, of Louisville, Kentucky, for her question:

What do lobsters eat?

We call him a shellfish, but the lobster is not at all related to the everyday fishes of the sea. A toothy fish grabs his food in gobs and gulps it down. The lobster is a dainty diner. He uses his own knife and fork and about 12 other built-in gadgets to cut his food into smaller and smaller pieces. Mr. Lobster does this delicate work carefully and takes his time. It has to be done because his swallow is rather small and he cannot stuff big gobs of food down his throat.

He lives on the bottom of the sea, scuttling over the muddy sand and skulking among the dusky rocks. He dines on meat and there are lots of good-tasting little creatures in his watery world. Sometimes he squats all day in his burrow among the rocks, waiting for his dinner to come swimming by. He pokes his two pairs of feelers out through a crack to sense what is around. Meantime his two eyes are keeping a sharp watch. Each eye is on the end of a long, movable stalk. And all the time he holds his two huge claws ready to grab.

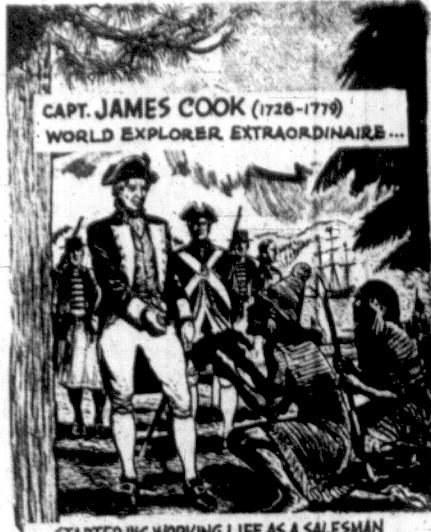

Maybe a fish swims innocently by. If the lobster can reach it, he grabs. But today, maybe, he fancies a dinner of shrimp or crab or even a lobster smaller than himself. Oh yes, the lobster eats other lobsters. If he happens to be young, he may be eaten by one of his aunts or uncles. Dinner, in any case, begins when a lobster grabs some unlucky victim in his mighty claws. Almost any sea-dweller will do — so long as it is smaller than the lobster and is not strong enough to eat him instead.

Cracks Shells

As a rule, Mr. Lobster is rather lazy. After all, his huge pincer claws are clumsy to carry and his crusty shell is heavy to drag around. But sometimes he fancies a clam dinner and off he scuttles on his eight spindly legs to find one. He uses his pincers to dig and scoop the clam out from his hiding place in the muddy sand. And he uses his pincer claws to crack open the shells.

One of these claws is bigger and stronger than the other. It may be the left one or the right one. The big claw is the mighty crusher, the one he uses to crack open clams and crusty crabs. When the crushing job is done, the smaller claw goes to work cutting and slicing like a sharp, jagged knife. The two claws work together, picking out the tastiest morsels of meat, chopping them into bits and stuffing the bits into his mouth. And his mouth has a dozen little jaws, saws and rugged ridges that mince the food into smaller and still smaller scraps for swallowing.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: My fish tank has a small family in it. There are two fat female guppies and one skinny male guppy. Sometimes one of the females has two or three babies. The trouble is I don't know which one is doing it. I am very anxious to find out if just one female is having all these babies or if they are taking turns like they should be. How can I tell? — A. McE.

DEAR A. McE.: One way to tell would be to divide the tank into two apartments and leave one female in each. To be fair, you would need to carefully transfer the male, occasionally. If you don't want to break up the family in this manner, it might still be possible to identify the youngsters by feeding one female separately on a specially prepared meal containing a dye (like Sudan black). This special snack would temporarily color Momma and any prospective small fry, an easily identifiable blueblack color.

DEAR DR. MILLER: This summer we plan to take Mr. Tom Kat with us to our lakeside cabin. If we keep him inside for a couple of days so he gets used to it, will he stay around so we don't have to worry about him getting lost? And are there any special vacation shots he needs? — W.A.

DEAR W.A.: Better make that a two-week quarantine, instead of only two days. Mr. Tom Kat may come down with cabin fever during the interval, but at least he should know where he belongs when he is turned loose. The first day out he should not be fed at first; and, if possible, you should stay nearby during

Quartet To Explore Indian Site

Four University of Victoria students will spend the summer digging in archeological sites that will be flooded later this year by the reservoir created by the High Arrow Dam.

Dave Sawbridge, Greg Monks, Tony Brown and Neil Vallance will leave this week to commence digging May 15.

Director of the project, Univ. professor D. H. Mitchell, said the students will be working four house pits, circular depressions which are the structural remains of old Indian homes.

Mr. Mitchell said it was not yet clear how old the structures were or to which Indian tribe they belonged.

"Our primary object," he said, "is to investigate sites that will be submerged and to recover as many artifacts as possible."

The project is being financed by the provincial government's Archeological Sites Advisory Board.

MAKE IT 'CIVILIZED'

Change Coming In Divorce Law

Coming changes in divorce legislation will make Canada's divorce laws "as civilized as any country in the world," the Progressive Conservative authority on divorce reform forecast Monday.

Grounds for divorce will probably be widened to include desertion, cruelty, drunkenness, drug addiction, and a breakdown in marriage from the physical incapacity of either party or through physical separation for a number of years, Robert McCleave, MP for Halifax, told a PC Association meeting at Mount View High.

Mr. McCleave, a member of the joint Senate-Commons committee on divorce reforms that is expected to hand down its report shortly, said the committee defined cruelty as "behavior that threatens to end the life or sanity of the victim so that the couple must be separated for protection."

Cruelty did not mean, he said, "the behavior leading to a 'movie-actor' divorce" granted because of a dispute over television or crackers in bed.

At present in most provinces, divorce is granted only on grounds of adultery.

Mr. McCleave also said the report would recommend that divorce legislation be applied uniformly across Canada, with no exceptions in Quebec or other area, and that women be granted the right to sue for divorce in whatever province they live, rather than be burdened with the expense of suing where the husband is, as is now the law.

Other recommendations, he said, would include giving county courts jurisdiction over divorce cases to make petition easier. At present divorce cases can only be handled by superior or supreme courts which, because they are on circuit, may mean a long waiting period in certain areas.

He criticized the government's armed forces integration policy, charging that expert advice against integration was disregarded for fear of Defence Minister Paul Hellyer's resignation.

The government, putting the welfare of the party before what the country needs, pushed the legislation through and kept Mr. Hellyer on," he said.

He derided the throne speech for not including references to the war on poverty, charging, "The shining knights in their Cadillacs have left this battlefield," and predicted a split within the Liberal party ranks within 10 years.

The left wing will be absorbed into the New Democratic Party, the right into the Conservatives, leaving a small, ineffectual centre bloc, he said.

George Chatterton, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, was nominated by acclamation as the riding's PC candidate in the next federal election, which will be run under the new redistribution bill.

Under the new law, based on the 1961 census, Esquimalt-Saanich picks up Esquimalt municipality, and loses all the up-island area north of Goldstream, Saanich south of Cedar Hill Cross Road and east of Cedar Hill Road and Sooke, Cobble Hill, Metchosin and Port Renfrew.

Also nominated were delegates to the three-day PC national leadership conference to be held in Toronto, Sept. 7 to 9.

Russ Simpson, 665 Birch Road, Sidney; Mrs. H. O'Malley, 1121 Old Esquimalt Road; G. W. Owen, 9620 West Saanich; Mrs. M. Dobson, 1220 Tattersall; Alan Willis, 1854 San Juan.

Alternates: Hugh Henderson and Mrs. Henderson, 4291 Gordon Head Road, Col. Herbert Marsh and Mrs. Marsh, 2915 Tudor Ave., and Mrs. Gloria Harrison, 3371 Oak Street.

Council Approves 7 Rezonings

Saanich council sped through seven rezoning applications in 45 minutes Monday night, giving approval to all of them.

Among those approved was Wooded Wonderland in Beaver Lake Park, which will allow it to continue operations until the end of next year's tourist season.

The Capital Regional District, new owner of the park land, decided earlier not to renew the lease held by the tourist attraction from the city of Victoria.

Because of a recent change in the Municipal Act, Wooded Wonderland cannot operate under a temporary licence from Saanich as it has in the past.

In a similar case, rezoning was granted for the Fable Cottage tourist attraction at 5187 Cordova Bay Road.

Other items approved were:

- From church to residential use, San Juan and Penshurst;
- Greenhouse, 6111 Patricia Bay Highway;
- Dental in mechanic's office, northeast corner of Quadra and St. Peter's;
- Two dwellings on the same lot, 4715 Beaver;
- Reduction in off-street parking requirement, senior citizens housing development at 1780 Townley.

Teacher Will Visit Guatemala

A school teacher from Frank Hobbs elementary school has been selected as adult delegate to the Children's International Summer Village, to be held this year in Guatemala.

Michael Auger, 20, Beechwood, will accompany this year's still-to-be selected children delegates from Vancouver Island. Last year's adult delegate, Lorna Stuart, 32, Standard, will go along as assistant camp director.

CISV, a non-profit organization dedicated to the furthering of international peace through the education of children, brings together in more than 40 villages around the world 11-year-olds from eight to 10 nations. In each village a pattern of simple camp life is followed for four weeks.

Cost of sending the Island delegation is to be met through the sale of raffle tickets at Mayfair Shopping Centre May 13 and Town and Country May 20. Prize is a $250 travel credit.

Dangerous Driver Restricted

A "nonchalant" driver who seemed unconcerned with his handling of a car, pleaded guilty to dangerous driving when he appeared in central court Saturday.

Donald Barnhart, 1168 Dunsterville, was fined $150 and his licence was restricted for three months, although he will be allowed to drive his car to work.

Evidence showed the accused had driven at speeds between 50 and 55 on Burnsides and apparently noticed a parked police car. He sped up to between 75 and 80 and forced another car to take swift, evasive action to avoid an accident.

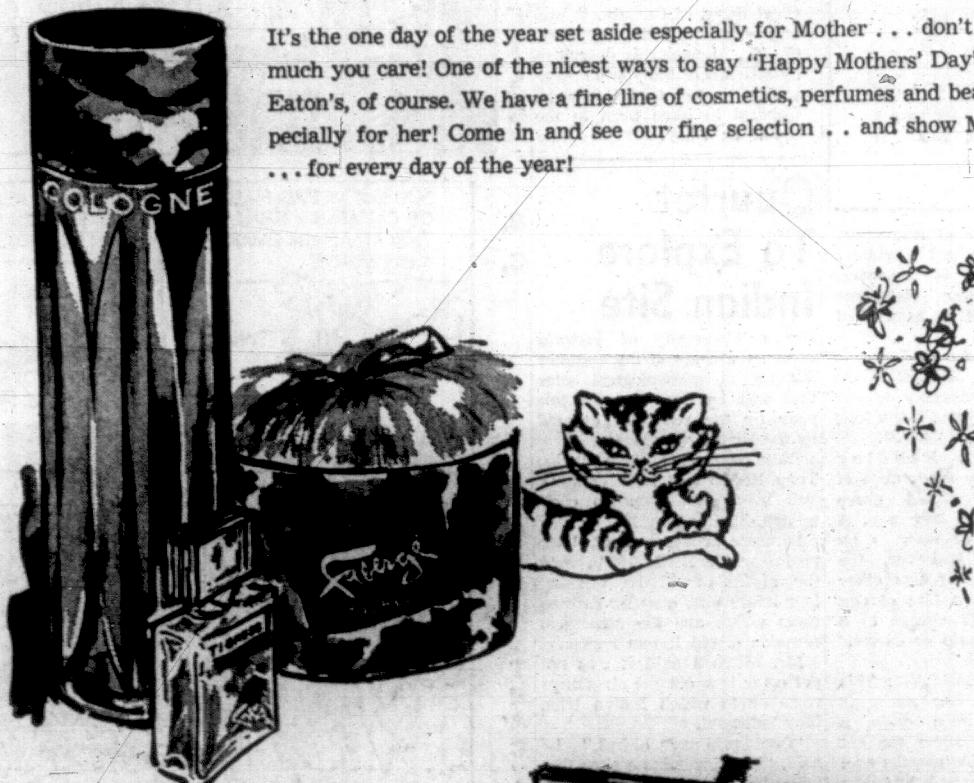

Police said that Barnhart was told he would be charged with dangerous driving but appeared nonchalant and unconcerned.

Social Reform Plans Supported

CHICAGO (AP) — An association representing 85 per cent of families of one race to "adopt" the priests in Chicago, on a Monday-through-Friday basis, children of other races and cultures. Closely related is a voluntary plan of inter-racial adoption as a way to bridge the racial gulf of racial misunderstanding.

The plan will be a key to a series of civil rights and social action resolutions approved Monday and today by the 1,400-member Association of Chicago Priests. The votes marked a shift in association policy from concern solely with the problems of priests to active participation in the social problems of the city.

The resolutions put the association on record in favor of broad school integration, open housing and civil rights programs as well as other social measures including fair treatment of teachers and other lay persons holding church jobs.

Fisheries Patrol Ship Launched

VANCOUVER (CP) — The latest addition to the federal fisheries department's extensive British Columbia patrol fleet was launched Monday at the Bel-Aire shipyard.

The 55-foot motor vessel Cutter Rock, named after Cutter Rock near Prince Rupert, has accommodation for a crew of three as well as a fisheries inspector. She will be commanded by Captain Oscar Windham.

Replacing a vessel which has been in service since 1931, the Cutter Rock has a yellow cedar hull, breaking the trend toward steel-hulled ships.

Designed by marine architect W. M. Reid, the vessel has a 14-foot beam and draws five feet three inches. Her 220-horsepower diesel will give a normal cruising speed in excess of 10 knots with a single screw.

Serious Unemployment Possible

Prospects Not Good Union Report Warns

A warning was sounded Monday that the economic boom may be ending.

"If inflation is not at this time a serious problem, there are signs that the general health of the economy is not good," delegates to the Canadian area convention of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union were told.

"In both Canada and the United States, the boom has been sustained by rapidly-rising capital expenditures."

"In Canada, for example, capital spending increased by 16 per cent in each of the years from 1963 to 1966."

"In B.C. there was actually an 18 per cent increase in capital spending last year. U.S. capital expenditures have been rising at similar rates."

But a federal survey of investment intentions reports that total capital spending in 1967 will rise only one per cent over last year and in B.C. it will fall by 3 per cent.

This was beginning to be reflected in the labor market and while unemployment figures were not high compared with previous recession periods, "They mark a turning point in the trend and could be the warning of serious unemployment ahead."

The ILWU officers report said 1966 may be described as the year in which wage bargaining "began to reflect" the conditions of the five-year boom.

The average hourly wage, including strong union areas and the unorganized sectors, rose by 6½ per cent. This compared with 5 per cent in 1965 and 3½ per cent in 1964.

But while 6½ per cent was a good increase the cost of living went up 3.7 per cent and in addition, every wage increase moves the worker further up

Housing Emergency In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto consumers group will ask Metropolitan Toronto council this week to declare a housing emergency and to halt all evictions of families with children.

Jacqueline Sheppard of Toronto, president of the Consumer Housewives Union, said such a declaration would warn people contemplating moving to the Toronto area about the housing situation here.

Robert Bradley, executive director of the Toronto Housing Authority, reported Friday the waiting list for public housing in the city leaped 30 per cent in the first three months of this year.

"The crisis is compounding itself," Mr. Bradley said.

"The figures are going to climb and there's no hope, as far as I can see, for any help."

He said applications for public housing in Toronto increased to 11,488 on March 31 from 8,454 at the end of last year. In the three-month period accommodation was found for 587 families.

Ingram Case Opens Assizes

The Spring Assizes at Victoria Law Courts will open Monday, May 15, at 11 a.m., with the trial of Kenneth Wayne Ingram, charged with attempted murder.

This is the first case set down for hearing. A judge has not yet been named.

Ingram was charged following a shooting affray at Sidney RCMP office. He will be defended by Lloyd G. McKenzie, QC, with Louis Lindholm as crown counsel.

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman today was granted an indefinite adjournment in the Parker royal commission hearings on the grounds that he has hired a lawyer and the lawyer needs time to prepare his case.

BRITISH COMMONS

Revolt Mounting Against ECM Bid

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—A hot-eyed socialist rebel and a tradition-loving Tory right-winger were parliamentary allies today in an apparently futile bid to block Prime Minister Wilson's road to Europe.

The odd alliance of the far left and the far right indicated the sweep rather than the numerical strength of opposition to the Labor government's plan to apply for membership in the European Common Market.

Tory Opposition Leader Edward Heath, an arch-marketeer, was star in the Commons debating lineup today and could be expected to roll over like a puppy with delight, as Wilson once said, at the thought of Common Market entry. This was the second day of a scheduled three-day discussion on the Common Market—the so-called "great debate" initiated by Wilson.

Revolt against the government's decision simmered angrily in the Commons Monday night even as Wilson appeared on television to outline Britain's position, as he did earlier in an 85-minute parliamentary speech.

AMENDMENT TABLED

Two hours after Wilson sat down in the 630-member Commons after his marathon speech, Labor dissidents tabled an amendment to the government motion approving entry. Within another hour, it had been signed by 30 Labor MPs, including members from the right and centre as well as the left wing, where the fires of market opposition burn brightest.

Tory back-bencher R. H. Turton, "father" of the Commons which he first entered in 1929, and Labor's Michael Foot, leading left-winger, both declared their intention of voting against the government and the leadership of their parties.

"Above all, we must not be whipped into the Common Market—and I certainly do not propose to be," said Foot.

Right-winger Turton dismissed Wilson's plans as "a betrayal of the principles of the queen of parliaments."

"It would create disloyalty to other Commonwealth countries and would place an unendurable burden on the British people."

NO EASY ROAD

Foot served notice that Wilson and Foreign Minister George Brown—"Don Quixote and Sancho Panza" as he called them—would not have an easy run to Europe. Even if the terms Wilson wanted were agreed by the present six market members, said Foot, nobody could deny that the Commonwealth would be damaged.

Increases in welfare state benefits—including pensions—if Britain joins the market were forecast by Wilson in his Commons speech and TV appearance.

He estimated that joining the market would cost the balance of payments—$100,000,000 ($300,000,000) a year for five years.

UBC Grad Surrenders To Police

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) Dennis Leo Krebs, who graduated this spring from the University of British Columbia, qualified for doctorate study at Harvard and married while a fugitive from jail, surrendered himself Monday to a Superior Court judge.

Krebs escaped from the San Mateo County Jail in Redwood City in 1962 after having served half of a 60-day term for driving under the influence of a dangerous drug. The judge ordered him back into custody to serve the remainder of the sentence.

WON SCHOLARSHIP

Krebs, now 24, has been awarded a full renewal scholarship to Harvard University to study social psychology.

The tall, wavy-haired fugitive pleaded guilty to an escape indictment.

His attorney, Gerald Ragan, said he will seek probation.

After his escape, Krebs worked as a lumberjack in Oregon and earned enough money to enter the University of B.C. as a psychology major.

MARRIED

While in school he married Judith Ann, 20, telling her about his past. A year and a half ago, Krebs said, they decided he would surrender after he had graduated. His wife is an elementary school teacher in British Columbia. They have no children.

Two months ago Krebs contacted Ragan and Monday's surrender was the result.

Boy Killed by Car

EDMONTON (CP) — A five-year-old boy was killed Sunday and a motorist charged with drunken driving and manslaughter. Ian Arbuckle of nearby Sherwood Park was killed when struck by a car as he stood on a sidewalk while waiting for his father, Gordon, to come from church. Ernesto Baroni, 41, was to appear in court today on the charges.

Doctors Want Curbs On Immigrant MDs

TORONTO (CP) — A screening program for foreign medical students who intend to immigrate to Canada was suggested Monday by Dr. R. K. Thompson, president of the Ontario Medical Association.

Speaking at the opening of the association's annual convention, he said examination results of the Medical Council of Canada showed a "great disparity between the performance of foreign graduates from countries other than Great Britain and the United States, despite the fact that most of them have spent at least one year in a Canadian hospital."

"It seems clear that there is an urgent need for procedures which would allow the selection of foreign-trained medical personnel to come to Canada for further training, and under certain circumstances to be permitted to write the qualifying examinations in Canada."

Dr. Thompson said the influx of medical immigrants has spared Canada from a serious shortage of medical manpower, but fewer could be expected in the future because of changes in conditions in countries where the doctors had trained.

BLAMES GOVERNMENT

He blamed the federal government for not facing up to the need to increase the number of trained doctors in Canada. The government had chosen instead to place the "production of medical manpower and paramedical services for Canada second to medical services insurance."

The amount of money spent by the government on building medical schools, Dr. Thompson said, is "a mere pittance of what is needed for Canada."

In a later session, the OMA approved a resolution urging a ban on all forms of cigarette advertising.

The resolution said the link between cigarette smoking and lung cancer, coronary artery disease, bronchitis and emphysema "has been established beyond a reasonable doubt."

Eastern Railway. "By and large I would say the board of directors holds few surprises for those who have been following it," Mr. Perrault said, referring to the "closeness of the Bennett family."

The Liberal leader said if the bank pursues economic rather than political aims, "it will be a worthwhile institution."

"I think what is of interest and of real importance will be the names of management and executive personnel, the people who will make the day-to-day decisions."

"No doubt many directors have demonstrated business acumen and ability. But I think it is equally important that this bank be completely divorced from the political community, and only in that way will it serve the best interests of the business community and the people."

"Mr. Gunderson has said he is no longer raising funds for the Social Credit party. I hope that is so, that he has acquired a better degree of objectivity," Mr. Perrault said.

Alex Macdonald (NDP-Vancouver East) quipped:

"It is unfortunate that it wasn't W. A. C. himself (who was elected). He always struck me as being a pretty good banker."

"But seriously, I would have no objection to this. The fact he is the premier's son should not restrict his activities any. He's an individual person and entitled to lead his own life."

Oak Bay Liberal Alan Macfarlane called Mr. Bennett "a fine young businessman. People are going to say he is going to control the bank through his father's influence. That need not be so. He probably will do the job properly. I hope he does."

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Courtney Hadcock found "nothing wrong" with the election of Mr. Bennett. "He's a young man, pretty smart and I don't see any harm. We need more youth in these things."

Approval of a judge for their release.

Neil J. Welch, special agent in charge of the FBI in Buffalo, said he had learned of the meeting through underworld sources a few hours before the raid.

Monday, Inspector William Pilkington, head of the Metropolitan Toronto police morality squad, said the Mafia is not active in the city.

"We know some drugs have come into Metro from New York and some from Buffalo," he said. "But there is little evidence of drugs, which were imported into Canada, going out of Metro into the United States."

Marijuana sold in Toronto, he said, did not originate from an organized syndicate.

Deputy Chief Bernard Simmonds of the Metro police said the Mafia has tried a number of times to get a foothold but police have crushed their efforts.

Assistant Commissioner Howard Graham, head of the criminal investigation branch of the Ontario Provincial Police, also said the Mafia is not a factor in Ontario crime and there is no evidence of Mafia infiltration.

'MONTREAL DRUG CENTRE'

MONTREAL (CP) — Supt. Ralph Carriere of the RCMP said today Montreal is one of the major centres in the world for the international transportation of narcotics.

The superintendent was commenting on published reports that the highway route between Montreal and New York is one of North America's principal narcotics traffic routes.

"We have evidence that Montreal has been used in the past a great deal to this sort of thing. There have been a number of convictions for large-scale narcotics smuggling."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Except for the north coast B.C. was cloudy overnight. Showers were reported from many points and Williams Lake recorded snow with an early morning temperature of 32 degrees. A ridge of high pressure building in the north will bring decreasing cloud to the Cariboo and Bulkley Valleys today. This clearing trend will move southward Wednesday but afternoon maximums will still be well below the long-time averages for mid-May.

NINETY-SEVEN OPPOSITION DIRECTORS

SEOUL (Reuters) — President Chung H. Park Monday named June 8 as election day for South Korea's 175-seat national assembly in the wake of the arrest of leading opposition candidates.

The provisional directors have, over the past three years, acted without remuneration, have paid their own expenses and have advanced money for the bank's organizational expenses.

He said the provisional directors' interest in the bank would in no way diminish after they handed the reins to the permanent board.

"Much work lies ahead," he said.

When asked what the five provisional directors — Fred Dietrich, Harold Elworthy, William Mearns, John Wallace and himself — expected in the way of remuneration for their efforts, Mr. Gunderson said they expected to be repaid for their outlay "except for time and energy . . . the blood, sweat and tears."

He said the provisional directors' interest in the bank would in no way diminish after they handed the reins to the permanent board.

"Much work lies ahead," he said.

JOHN A. BRUNSET of West Vancouver: Vice-president, West Canada Mineral Holdings Ltd.; director Lafarge Cement Company of North America.

Liberals and NDP speakers criticized clauses calling for liens to be placed on properties that qualify for the deferrals.

LIBERAL AND NDP SPEAKERS

Arthur Mayse

On Monday I listened to a mother and then, an hour or so later, to a father whose accounts were in certain respects around a teen-ager who the same. Each centred had dropped out of school and left home. And in both cases, in the world beyond the disciplines they fled, an enemy of youth and promise was waiting.

Marijuana is its now-familiar name.

It is non-addictive in the physical sense, a fact of which we are frequently reminded by those who would legalize its use.

But it seems, nonetheless, to have helped the and the girl foul up their lives.

The girl was a good student, the boy poor in classes, but with gifts that society could have used. Instead, with the pleasant thief of ambition to assist, they have joined the operators-of society.

I do not doubt that other factors contributed to the change these two have undergone. But marijuana played its part, substituting comfortable illusion for a hurtful reality.

As one who believes that realities should be faced, not retreated from, I take an extremely square position in the matter of narcotic-inspired creeds and cults which provide false gospel for the gullible.

The assumption back of them is that you, I, and the other squares have got the world into a horrible mess, and that the new generation has no recourse but to withdraw from it into a nirvana where all will be well.

This, of course, is pure rhetoric, though it makes good bearing to the weak, the ineffectual and the chronically dissatisfied.

That the world has its grave troubles, none of us can deny. But I cannot see that retreat into a shadowland of narcotic delusion is likely to provide any solutions worth having.

Neither do the great majority of our young people — and for this, we can be profoundly glad. It is they, not the apostles of banned narcotics who will provide the answers we need in a world which has yet to learn how to live up to its racing technology.

These are the boys and girls who do not drop out, and because they are our chief hope, I think we should protect them from the nihilist fringe by all means at our command.

It has been alleged in this regard, that the users and advocates of marijuana and other narcotics have penetrated into our schools. If this is so — and if it isn't, we are luckier than most — we cannot afford the luxury of complacency.

I think we have indulged ourselves too far in that direction already. We have also strained tolerance in this matter of trafficking in illicit kick-providers to the limit.

We have heard too much glib patter to the effect that the only thing wrong with marijuana smoking is the rap, and we have had it over-impressed upon us that the trade in this narcotic is a sort of between-friends arrangement.

Up to a point, no doubt it is. However, the friendship does seem to have its price; and despite all disclaimers to the contrary, I suspect that marijuana is being pushed into this city and all other North American centres by men who make high profits from the trade.

A lot of us have been too casual and too lax about the creeping evil that has come among us.

I think it's time we reminded ourselves that no matter how lulling the propaganda pitch, the smoking of marijuana is unequivocally against the law.

I am for that law, and am not of a mind to extend sympathy to those who break it.

CAST IN THE SAME ROLE with broken legs are Ted Iwanowski, of 338 Rutherford Street, and the family dog Trixi. Mr. Iwanowski returned from long stay in hospital to be greeted by Trixi, who broke front left leg in April. Both felt sympathetic remembering the old saying: "Let he who is without casts among you . . ." (Bill Halkett photo.)

UNION BATTLE

Showdown Vote Called at Mill

A representation vote will be held among employees of the Gold River pulp mill to determine which of two unions they want to represent them.

The contenders are the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

The decision to call a vote of the workers was made last week by the Labour Relations Board and disclosed today.

Earlier, the board ruled out the International Woodworkers of America from the certification battle because its applications were not accompanied by signed member application cards and evidence the workers had paid one month's dues, a requirement of the Labour Relations Act.

For the same reason, the board ruled out the joint IWA-Pulp Sulphite application. The representation vote date has not been set, but could be next week.

The Gold River mill is nearing completion on the west coast of Vancouver Island. It is expected to go into production this summer.

At present there are about 150 employees. Under the act, the successful union must obtain a majority of the eligible voters regardless of the number who may actually vote.

If the figure of 150 is used, the winning union must get 76 votes or more.

Special School for the Bright?

John Edwards' mild manner and soft voice give the impression that, even with provocation, he would not be easily annoyed.

But inside the man there is anger that comes out, quietly but firmly, when he talks about society, the educational system and politicians.

R. John C. Edwards is the University of Victoria's first Rhodes Scholar. He will study English literature at Hertford College, Oxford, in the coming year after a summer course at Edinburgh.

The son of a retired power commission official, John Edwards was born in England, raised in the Channel Islands and educated in high school here and eventually university where he has been for the past four years.

His education in the Channel Islands was at a private school in Jersey.

And after that, the B.C. school system proved disappointing, to say the least.

He deplores the system which grades children according to age in schools.

"It presumes that all children progress at the same rate."

Frustration

It's bad for bright students and poor students. It produces boredom and frustration. A particularly bright student can be bored and his attitude can produce an adverse effect on other students, Mr. Edwards thinks.

He prefers the private school system which enables teachers to teach "classes" of about 13 students and is not co-educational.

"This avoids the social problems which arise through having girls and boys in the same class."

Uniforms and traditions appeal to the student of English literature.

... why not?

"There is more of a sense of institution which one doesn't get in public schools."

The alternative is what he calls "bright" schools, that is, schools for brighter students so they can avoid schools geared for mass education.

Too Many Essays

"It's considered 'sissy' to be a good student here," he said, and added that this attitude has a blunting effect on intellectual development.

His experience at the University of Victoria has done little to lessen his disenchantment with the education system.

He is "fed up with the impositions" of the system on a literary person.

"You can't write a poem by lecture, but you must try," he said. "There are too many lectures, too many essays."

"The yardstick of excellence in some North American universities is measured by the number of lectures, he said.

He would prefer a tutorial

Ted Gaskell Talks To

system under which a handful of students are assigned to a tutor who advises them what to read, then gives criticism and comments on their essays.

Bright Colleges

And if "bright" schools are needed for schools, then why not "bright" universities for higher education, he asks?

"In B.C. there are four universities and a junior college. The standards are all the same. Why not have a university for the best students and make the entrance mark higher?"

Governments provide universities but they aren't willing to provide the kind of system which would produce better students, he said.

And if the system isn't good some students aren't much better. He deplores the sit-ins in protest of the dismissal of teachers at the university.

"Call it firing. That's what it was!" "Sit-ins are supposed to represent thinking. It's just the opposite."

Society should change its 18th century attitude to innocuous drugs like marijuana. More compassion, more common sense should be shown.

Society, Shut Up

"Society thinks addiction of any kind, except addiction to political power, a weakness and penalizes it. Society should shut up and let a person be himself."

Mr. Edwards has never tried marijuana but feels that people should be allowed to if they wish.

He approves of fads and fashions although he dresses conservatively. He likes long hair although his own is comparatively short.

"One has to compromise. The clean-cut image is the thing for a Rhodes scholar."

He didn't particularly want to apply for the scholarship but was pursued by friends and teachers at university.

As a high school student, Mr. Edwards didn't think himself particularly outstanding. He took part in track and won scholarships "like everybody else." But the combination of his abilities resulted in his being chosen from 10 B.C. finalists.

Athletics

There are half-a-dozen stipulations in the Rhodes will under which the scholarships are awarded and, although athletics is stressed, it is by no means of prime importance.

"I think Cecil Rhodes saw in the stipulations the kind of man he couldn't be. He left Oxford a number of times due to ill health and went to South Africa to recuperate.

"I think the kind of man he visualizes would be rather boring," says Mr. Edwards.

"Too perfect."

DON'T SHOOT TSAR CANNON WHILE DRUNK

MOSCOW (UPI) — For the Soviets, recent U.S. State Department warnings to Americans touring Russia are one big laugh.

The Soviet newspaper Literary Gazette scoffed today at the State Department warning and issued a few tongue-in-cheek warnings of its own:

— Do not take away the Tsar cannon from the Kremlin.

— Do not shoot elephants in the Moscow Zoo.

— Do not swim in the Moscow river without bathing suits or while drunk.

"Anybody who breaks these rules will naturally be arrested and exiled to Siberia," it said.

BENNETT STATEMENT 'INFAMOUS'

Council Censures Premier

Premier Bennett was condemned in a motion passed by Esquimalt council Monday night.

Councillors were discussing a motion of support for the Union of B.C. Municipalities request that the provincial government meet the rising cost of teacher's salaries when Coun. Roy Elphick moved the motion of censure.

"Premier Bennett's infamous statements about crying towels were not fit for a man of his stature," said Coun. Elphick.

Questioned after the meeting, Reeve Ray Bryant said, "You can always tell when you're hitting home with Bennett — he starts grabbing for the verbiage."

Of a seven mill increase in the Esquimalt tax rates this year, five mills were an increase in the school levy.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

YACHT RACE PLANNED

Turkey Head Club Names First Slate

A new yacht club was officially born Monday evening when the Turkey Head Sailing Association held its first election at the Oak Bay Marina.

Dick James, veteran yachtsman and principal of the North Ward Elementary School who organized the group originally formed to promote winter sailing in the Oak Bay area, was elected the association's first commodore.

Peter Ferguson is vice-commodore, Charlie Pash, fleet captain and Dennis Roberts, secretary-treasurer.

Representing the various class yachts in competition are: cruising classes, Glen Higgins; Thunderbirds, Rod McBride; Haidas, Don McCowan; Sharks, John McDonald, and Cal 20s, George Dufour.

The name of the new yacht club was chosen because most of the group's races are sailed off Turkey Head, the point on which the marina is located.

SUBMIT DESIGNS

Commodore James announced that a competition will be held in which members will submit designs for a club burgee.

One design has already been entered. It features the red head of a gobbler, superimposed on a gold background.

It was decided the spring and summer seasons will be organized to provide programs of racing and cruising.

The first race will take place off the marina this coming Saturday at 1 p.m. Weather permitting, it is hoped to have

DEMOCRACY PROMISED TO GREEKS

ATHENS (UPI) — Greeks were promised today a return to parliamentary rule as soon as a "modernized" constitution is approved by the nation's voters.

Interior Minister Stylianos Pattakos, a brigadier-general who played a key role in the April 21 coup, announced the proposed plebiscite on constitutional reform Monday but did not set a date for the vote.

Pattakos also warned that anyone found writing anti-government slogans on walls or distributing Communist literature would be shot without trial.

STRASBOURG, France (UPI) — The European Parliament, a forum for legislators from the six Common Market countries, warned Greece Monday it risks losing its association with the economic community unless it restores democratic rule.

Hardly able to believe their luck, Mr. John Lukas and Mrs. G. A. Powell (third and fourth from left) were elated, Monday evening. They won the raffle of the Victoria Duplicate Bridge Club which saw them drawing Mr. Oswald Jacoby (second from right), number one master ranking player, for the men's pairs and mixed pairs games in this week's regional tournament of the American Contract Bridge League, being held at the Empress Hotel. Also seen at Monday's cocktail party in the Victoria Golf Club are Mr. William Champion, president of the Victoria club; Mrs. Champion and Mrs. Jacoby.

'Warmed-Up Leftovers'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition party leaders have greeted the Speech from the Throne Monday as a collection of old unkept promises.

"A rehash and mishmash of all the promises and expectations uttered by this government for four years," said Conservative Leader Diefenbaker.

Both commented on the length of the speech, which took

Government Has Shelved Scholarships

OTTAWA — The Liberal government's proposal for 10,000 university scholarships per year has been quietly shelved for the time being, it was learned here today following the opening of the second and centennial session of the 27th Parliament.

The promise of the scholarships figured prominently in election campaigns, but when the federal government got around to discussing this proposal with the university and provincial government authorities it found them less than enthusiastic.

Problems faced by the universities include finding the actual physical plant to accommodate all the thousands of students now flocking to the universities.

The federal government has in effect been bluntly informed by the provincial and university authorities that it was all very well for the federal Liberal party to promise to spend vast sums in such "vote-catching" proposals as scholarships, but it was something else again to find the accommodation for students on such scholarships. The government has been informed that what is much more urgently required at the present is not the scholarships but funds for the universities and provinces with which to expand the physical accommodations at the institutes of higher learning.

At the last federal-provincial conference the federal government, acting on such suggestions, earmarked more funds to be used in improving educational facilities. For the time being, until the overall university physical plant in this country has been enlarged, the Liberal government will hold off in the implementation of its pledge for 10,000 university scholarships a year, informed sources said.

Bennett's Son, Gunderson On Bank Board

VANCOUVER (CP) — Newly-appointed directors of the Bank of British Columbia were meeting today to elect a temporary president and vice-president of Canada's newest chartered bank.

DECRIES LACK OF LIFT Mr. Diefenbaker said the speech failed utterly to offer anything to "lift up Canadians to inspire them to national goals" in Centennial Year.

It should have been a year to convene a national conference on the constitution, he said. Canadians would have been in a mood to demand that their representatives come to an agreement creating a constitution "made in Canada by Canadians."

The speech revealed a cabinet split on foreign investment and offered nothing to labor. The CBC was torn asunder with "uncertainty, separation and division" because the government has not appointed a new president and vice-president.

Eastern Railway.

"By and large I would say the board of directors holds few surprises for those who have been following it," Mr. Perrault said, referring to the "closeness of the Bennett family."

The Liberal leader said if the bank pursues economic rather than political aims, "it will be a worthwhile institution."

"I think what is of interest and of real importance will be the names of management and executive personnel, the people who will make the day-to-day decisions."

"No doubt many directors have demonstrated business acumen and ability. But I think it is equally important that this bank be completely divorced from the political community, and only in that way will it serve the best interests of the business community and the people."

"Mr. Gunderson has said he is no longer raising funds for the Social Credit party. I hope that is so, that he has acquired a better degree of objectivity," Mr. Perrault said.

Alex Macdonald (NDP-Vancouver East) quipped:

"It is unfortunate that it wasn't W. A. C. himself (who was elected). He always struck me as being a pretty good banker."

"But seriously, I would have no objection to this. The fact he is the premier's son should not restrict his activities any. He's an individual person and entitled to lead his own life."

Oak Bay Liberal Alan Macfarlane called Mr. Bennett "a fine young businessman. People are going to say he is going to control the bank through his father's influence. That need not be so. He probably will do the job properly. I hope he does."

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Courtney Hadcock found "nothing wrong" with the election of Mr. Bennett. "He's a young man, pretty smart and I don't see any harm. We need more youth in these things."

urban West Seneca. Joseph was identified in 1963 as a section leader in the Buffalo Cosa Nostra. Nicholas has had at least 16 court appearances on gambling charges, police said, and drew a one-year sentence for possession of bookmaking records last year.

Ray Carlisi, 58, of Buffalo, who has been associated with various business ventures in the Buffalo area, police said.

Published reports claim Maggadino has extended operations to Toronto, but three Ontario police officials insisted Monday that the Mafia, the secret underworld society and its Cosa Nostra factional leaders, is not a factor in crime in Ontario.

Police said several of those arrested, including LaDuka and Carlisi, were among 65 men picked up by state police in a raid Nov. 14, 1957, on the Apalachin, N.Y., home of the late Joseph Barbara during an alleged "crime convention."

Investigators said the two meetings had other similarities. In both cases, no weapons were found. Large sums of cash were found, however, as much as $6,000 today.

Police said many of the men tried to pay bail in cash. Under the law concerning "consorting," however, they needed the approval of a judge for their release.

Neil J. Welch, special agent in charge of the FBI in Buffalo, said he had learned of the meeting through underworld sources a few hours before the raid.

Monday, Inspector William Pilkington, head of the Metropolitan Toronto police morality squad, said the Mafia is not active in the city.

"We know some drugs have come into Metro from New York and some from Buffalo," he said. "But there is little evidence of drugs, which were imported into Canada, going out of Metro into the United States."

BANK

The remaining 12 directors named at a meeting of founders shareholders Monday are B.C. businessmen, three from the Victoria area.

BOARD APPROVED

A board of directors of from 14 to 25 members was approved by shareholders.

The shareholders also authorized the directors to hold the bank's first annual meeting on Jan. 20, 1969, the closest convenient date after the Oct. 31, 1968, fiscal year-end that will be observed by the nine other Canadian chartered banks.

The bank received its charter from Parliament last December and has the blessing of Premier Bennett's government.

At Monday's meeting, it was announced that shareholders had subscribed a total of $2,670,425, of which more than $2,000,000, had been paid. Mr. Gunderson said 106,817 shares have been issued, most of them in 1,000-share blocks to the 134 founder-shareholders.

The bank now plans to raise its full capital and will offer 525 shares to the public in June. Whatever amount is raised, the federal government will authorize a capitalization of double that amount to provide for future expansion.

When the capital has been raised and the capitalization approved, the bank will be granted its certificate and the Bank of B.C. will go into business, probably in the fall.

NEED CERTIFICATE

"We cannot make contracts, lease or purchase premises or hire personnel until we receive the certificate," said Mr. Gunderson. "Hence at this time we cannot secure a chief executive officer and other management personnel."

"With head office in Vancouver, we hope it will have a strong orientation toward B.C. and toward the Pacific trading rim, which will in fact, make us an international bank."

"Consequently, we feel the development of our branch system should begin in this province, with the first two branches in Vancouver and Victoria. The third branch probably will be in Toronto, to give us an early alignment with the money markets of Eastern Canada."

"As quickly as we can hire and train management and operating personnel and set up physical locations and administrative controls, we are going to open branches in the principal areas of B.C. on an expanding scale."

He said prairie branches are also planned for the future and there is also the possibility of one in Montreal.

Mr. Gunderson said shares will be offered across the country, but the largest proportion is expected to be subscribed in B.C.

"Every person in B.C. who applies for shares will get them," he said. "If there is an over-subscription, the small shareholders will get preference."

When asked what the five provisional directors—Fred Dietrich, Harold Elworthy, William Mearns, John Wallace and himself—expected in the way of remuneration for their efforts, Mr. Gunderson said they expected to be repaid for their outlay "except for time and energy . . . the blood, sweat and tears."

He said the provisional directors have, over the past three years, acted without remuneration, have paid their own expenses and have advanced money for the bank's organizational expenses.

He said the provisional directors' interest in the bank would in no way diminish after they handed the reins to the permanent board.

"Much work lies ahead," he said.

SEOUL (Reuters) — President Chung H. Park Monday named June 8 as election day for South Korea's 175-seat national assembly in the wake of the arrest of leading opposition candidates.
